John D., Jr., for Repeal
Routine and Other Crimes
Chile Boils Up
Loaves and Fishes Wanted
—By Arthur Brisbane—

WASHINGTON REPORTS that President Hoover has approved a plank for the Republican platform letting the people vote on the Eighteenth Amendment, "a resubmission" plank. This recognition of the people's right to pass on any part of the Constitution at any time seems reasonable. It is supposed to be their Constitution.

The big prohibition news comes in a letter written by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, expressing an earnest hope that both Republicans and Democrats will incorporate a prohibition repeal plank in their platforms.

This seems to dispose of the theory, widely circulated, that the younger Mr. Rockefeller has been financing prohibition recently.

This is a small part of routine crime news in one city, New York. Benjamin Rosenblum, owner of a fur company, was locked in his fur vault by bandits and, not quite dead when taken out, was resuscitated.

Agent H. J. Simons and Deputy Bernstein, with 20 helpers from the Department of Justice, raided a 300,000-gallon whiskey still, in South st., a few doors north of the building in which this is written. It was well arranged, with a tunnel leading to a garage, as a "getaway," and in the garage was a 10,000-gallon molasses barrel.

Federal Judge Coleman sentenced three racketeers to prison for failing to pay income tax on $1,270,000 of net profits. They confessed. Crime has become a business.

Geolando Terrana, restaurant owner, was called to the door by a young man, name unknown, yesterday morning. The man fired two shots into Terrana's heart. His wife is a widow and his three children have no father. The killer walked away. Those are "routine incidents in our crime wave.

One other crime was not, or at least should not be, part of any "routine." A woman 80 years old., defenseless in her little house, was visited by two men. They thought that in her long, hard working life she must have saved much money and asked for it. She gave them five dollars, saying it was all she had. They did not believe her, beat her, tortured her and left. She died.

Even this callous age of crime should be interested in an incident of that kind and do something about it.

The world's restlessness comes to a head in our South American neighbor, Chile. President Montero is ousted, a sort of Communism taking his place. Big fortunes are to be confiscated. Russia's Soviet government is to be recognized by the Chilean government.

Americans have more than one thousand million dollars invested in Chile, to say nothing of a 350 million nitrate trust, and some of them are worrying. But that is probably premature. Sometimes South American republics have revolutions and then change their minds.

A counter-revolution had started yesterday. The Chilean army and navy, including the air force, are with the revolution. That is important, perhaps dangerous.

It is amusing to read that Congress is guarded by extra police to control veterans lobbying for the bonus, and that "a food crisis is increasing as 5000 men near the Capital."

There wasn't any "food crisis" when this country was implored, beseeched and commanded to feed MILLIONS in Belgium, Armenia, Turkey, Russia and Heaven knows where. Millions were easily found for THAT work. Why is it so difficult to feed a small handful of Americans who went through the war, deprived of a chance to get their share of big war time wages, to say nothing of patriotic grafting?

Owen D. Young, speaking at Notre Dame, says the President of the United States should have greater power, even though it might involve abandonment of part of the present system of checks and balances. Additional power is needed to enable the chief executive to deal effectually with economic crisis, according to Mr. Young.

Others believe that the President has more power than any ruler on earth, now that the Czar and the Sultan have vanished.

The early Americans, throwing off the power of the English kings, thought they could arrange a plan under which power would be located nowhere in particular. They were mistaken. Power always goes somewhere, and here it has gone to organized finance.

The President of the United States can take it away and exercise it himself, whenever he chooses.

JUDGE STONE IS BITTERLY DENOUNCED BY THOMPSON

Calls Him "Embezzler, Liar and Black-Hearted Betrayer of Trust"

In one of the most unrestrained denunciations ever publicly visited upon a judge, Atty. William G. Thompson today accused Judge Arthur P. Stone of Cambridge of embezzlement and deceit. He said he was unfit to sit upon the bench.

"I don't see where you could find a clearer case of wrongdoing," he shouted.

"This judge, with his power over the lives of others, is an embezzler. Where his testimony has contradicted that of others, he has lied.

BETRAYAL OF TRUST

"As chairman of the grievance committee of the Massachusetts Bar Association I consider it my duty to appear against him.

"A judge should be held to stricter accountability than other men. Respect for courts will not survive if the judges become embezzlers.

"Taking power of attorney from a dying and irrational woman was in itself black hearted betrayal of trust. Yet this man, who took money for doing for a sick woman what honorable men would have done out of pity, did not blush as he sent harmless drunks to jail for 30 days."

UNETHICAL MANNER

He followed Atty. W. Easton Leach in argument.

Leach said Stone pocketed $600 during his administration of the Clarke estate, and did not act in an ethical manner.

Judge John Maloney, counsel for Stone, followed Thompson. Probthere will be no immediate decision, however.

Denouncing Thompson, Maloney said he had never heard such a vitriolic speech in a courtroom.

"There has been an attempt to stir up popular passion against this man," he added. "We ask no favors. We want no surrender to mob spirit, however."

Judge Collen C. Campbell took the case under advisement.

White House Angry at Feeding "Army"; 8000 Are to Parade Tonight

1—Fresh arrivals in th. city are expected to swell the "expeditionary army" to upwards of 7500 for the parade tonight from the White House to Capitol Hill. It is estimated that at least 4000 were in the city at dawn today.

2—Fifty extra police are on guard at the Capitol to prevent any disturbance. Reports from many parts of the country show thousands are on the march without any serious disorder.

3—Plenty of food has been provided those who cannot pay for it on their way and in Washington market men and other provision dealers have donated supplies for the contingent already encamped there.

4—"Sit tight; we'll be here till 1945," is the slogan of the campers. Tonight's parade is not to be the climax of the demonstrations by any means, it is declared, for some marchers have barely gotten under way from such remote distances as the west coast and the States farthest south.

5—Rev. Fr. James R. Cox of Pittsburgh who led a battalion of unemployed to Washington last winter has been requested to act as spokesman for the veterans in presenting their bonus plea to President Hoover and Congress.

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Police of the capital mobilized today to meet the increasingly aggravating problem of mounting numbers of veterans within the city.

All leaves of absence were cancelled and one-third of the available officers were assigned to special duty in connection with the bonus-seeking contingents.

Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, has been warned by Police Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby that his continued efforts to shelter and feed the bonus marchers, whose first big parade is scheduled for tonight, might lead to his "peremptory dismissal" by the White House.

This notice, it was authoritatively said today, followed criticism made to District of Columbia commissioners by members

The bonus army climbs the steps of the nation's Capitol, mounting against the background of the marble dome, faces set to the goal. They want the bonus. They insist they want it—right or wrong—so they can buy food. They cry they want it so they can keep homes together. They have one idea, one emotion, a singleness of purpose that arguments about economics can't shake—they want the bonus! They aren't complaining. They sleep in tents or in the open, bivouacked with one obsession. They want the bonus! They are being fed—now. They say they'll wait till 1950 if necessary. When the food runs out, they may not be so patient. Weary and footsore, they climb the Capitol steps, attend a session of the House, cheer a speech favoring the barring of alien reds—and are warned against demonstration.

Washington, June 7 (US)—Hello, everybody! This blast comes from the Washington Zoo. I don't mean the one in Rock Creek Park. I am referring to the one on Capitol Hill.

The animals are all disturbed. The old Congressional dog Rover has suddenly found himself full of fleas, and is he beginning to scratch?

Rover had been dozing along lazy-like over there in the sun on Capitol Hill for some time and not figuring on stirring himself much until after the election or at least until after the conventions, and then along comes this pesky case of fleas interfering with his rest and pleasure and making him squirm in all directions.

Old Congressional Rover's had fleas before but never anything like this set. The old unorganized taxpayer fleas got on his back occasionally but he just walked out from under 'em.

BLONDE WITH FATAL WINE PARTY IS HUNTED

A fast-moving party of shifting scenes, which began last night in a North End restaurant, ended early today in Woburn with the murder of a Boston girl.

Jean Calloway, 29, and attractive, described by police as a linguist and a "party girl" of the Starr Faithful type, leaped or was thrown to her death from an automobile that then sped away.

She formerly lived at 39 Worcester sq., South End, but her address since last November has not been determined.

BLONDE, 7 MEN SOUGHT

Several hours before she met death she had been beaten.

A blonde named "Helen" and two men with whom she spent the first part of the evening in a wine and spaghetti cafe in Thacher st., North End, and five men later seen in the restaurant are being sought by police.

Dist. Atty. Bishop took personal charge of the investigation with State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neill and the Woburn and Boston police co-operating.

Medical Examiner Timothy Leary of Boston was assigned by Bishop to perform an autopsy with Dr Vernon C Stewart, the Woburn medical examiner.

BODY IS IDENTIFIED

The girl plunged to her death, apparently during a struggle to avoid an attack, police said, in Cambridge rd, Woburn, near the junction of Lexington st. Her spine was fractured in two places, and she died in the Choate Memorial Hospital Woburn, about 4 a. m., two hours after being found.

In her pocketbook was a card on which had been written, "Millie Hoyer, 35 Decatur st., Charlestown," and as a result of this card, identification of the victim and some of the details of the party were established eight hours after the crime.

Miss Hoyer, who did not reach her own home until early this morning, made the identification at the hospital.

TELLS OF MEETING

She said she had met Miss Calloway only three or four times, each time in the company of a different man. She understood she was divorced and the mother of two children, she said.

Last night, Miss Hoyer said, she went to the Thatcher st. cafe about 10:45 and there found Miss Calloway with the blonde, "Helen," accompanied by two well-dressed men.

They were eating spaghetti and had been drinking considerable wine Miss Hoyer said, and the man with Miss Calloway was pleading with her to accompany him. Miss Hoyer said Miss Calloway told her:

"Millie, don't leave me. I don't

New Bedford, June 7—Rather than face the unpleasantness of testifying in a criminal court, Mrs. Oliver Prescott will drop her charge of robbery while armed against Midhat Sergabi, of Washington st., West Roxbury.

8 Die, 6 Missing, 40 Hurt in Cleveland Hotel Fire

Cleveland, June 7 (AP)—Eight persons are known to be dead, a half-dozen were missing and nearly two-score others were burned or injured in an explosion and fire that destroyed the six-story Ellington apartment building early today.

The only known list of tenants was destroyed.

The Ellington, hostelry of an older era and locale of many brilliant events in the early part of the century, was a scene of horror.

The quiet of East 86th st. at Superior ave. was shattered by a blast that was felt over all downtown Cleveland. A solid wall of flame quickly enveloped the building, trapping occupants in their rooms.

A crowd of 10,000 watched as screaming figures were silhouetted against the windows. The body of an unidentified man hurtled from the fifth floor to a second floor ledge.

Onlookers, joining firemen, fought their way into the smoke and flames to accomplish scores of heroic rescues. A taxi driver braved death a half dozen times to bring out eight women.

Mickey Cochrane, catcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, and Lou Hetterman, sports writer for the Philadelphia Bulletin, came from their rooms in the nearby Hollenden Hotel to aid in the rescues, bringing three girls down a ladder to safety.

Subsequent explosions hurled glass and blazing embers over the crowd, which stampeded to safety, and ignited awnings a block south on Euclid ave.

Only two of eight bodies recovered have been identified. They were Mrs. Anna Mitchell, 70, and C. W. Warnicke, 68. Both, apparently, were suffocated before the flames reached them.

SENATE PASSES SUBWAY BILL

The bill authorizing the $8,000,000 Huntington ave. subway extension was passed by the Senate today.

It goes back to the House for final passage, and then to Gov. Ely for his signature. He is expected to sign.

The bill, proposed by Mayor Curley, is characterized as one of the most constructive measures discussed at this session.

Transit authorities have already said they can start work within 60 days of the signing of the bill. This will require 2000 to 4000 workers, or may last two years.

It is assumed most of these will be from the soldiers aid list. A few may be from the general city welfare roster.

ROCKEFELLER URGES BOTH PARTIES TO BACK REPEAL

TEXT OF OIL MAGNATE'S LETTER CALLING DRY LAW A FAILURE

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for many years a generous contributor to the Anti-Saloon League, urges both major parties to adopt prohibition repeal planks.

His plea was contained in a letter to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and a delegate to the Republican convention, which opens next week.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

Butler had announced he would make a floor fight, if necessary, for a repeal resolution and determination by the states.

Rockefeller's letter came as one of the most important incidents since prohibition was enacted. Like his father he has always been regarded as an adamant dry.

The Rockefeller letter follows:

"My Dear President Butler:

"The morning papers print a resolution which it is stated you are proposing to offer for incorporation in the platform of the Republican party at the national convention in Chicago next week. I quote the resolution in full."

Rockefeller then quotes the repeal plank proposed by Dr. Butler. This would pledge the Republican party to ask Congress to submit to the various states a proposal to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. It would also commit the party, in the event of repeal, to work for legislation by the individual states to control the liquor traffic. His letter continues:

Urges Plank on Both Parties

"With this resolution I am in complete sympathy and earnestly hope not only that it will be incorporated in the Republican plaform, but that a similar resolution will be incorporated in the Democratic platform, thus taking the question of repeal out of the field of partisan politics.

"My position may surprise you, as it will many of my friends. I was born a teetotaler; all my life I have been a teetotaler on principle. Neither my father nor his father ever tasted a drop of intoxicating liquor, nor have I. My mother and her mother were among the dauntless women of their day, who, hating the horrors of drunkenness, were often found with bands of women of like mind, praying on their knees in the saloons in their ardent desire to save men from the evils that so commonly sprang from those sources of iniquity. Although a teetotaler on principle and in practice, I have always stood for whatever measure seemed at the time to give promise of best promoting temperance.

"With my father, I for years supported the Anti-Saloon League in both its State and National work. It was at one time reported that our contributions toward the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment amounted to between $15,000,000 and $30,000,000. As I have previously stated, from the year 1900 up to and including the date of the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment, the contributions of my father and myself to all branches of the Anti-Saloon League, Federal and State—the only contributions made by us in support of prohibition legislation—aggregated $350,000.

"When the Eighteenth Amendment was passed I earnestly hoped—with a host of advocates of temperance—that it would be generally supported by public opinion, and thus the day be hastened when the value to society of men with minds and bodies free from the undermining effects of alcohol would be generally realized. That this has not been the result, but rather that drinking generally has increased; that the speakeasy has replaced the saloon, not only unit or unit, but probably two-fold, if not three-fold; that a vast army of lawbreakers has been recruited and financed on a colossal scale; that many of our best citizens, piqued at what they regarded as an infringement of their private rights, have openly and unabashed disregarded the Eighteenth Amendment; that as an inevitable result respect for law has been greatly lessened; that crime has increased to an unprecedented degree—I have slowly and reluctantly come to believe.

"Benefits Outweighed by Evils"

"I am not unmindful of the great blessing which the abolition of the saloon has been to our country or of certain other benefits that have resulted from the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. It is my profound conviction, however, that these benefits, important and far reaching as they are, are more than outweighed by the evils that have developed and flourished since its adoption, evils which, unless promptly checked, are likely to lead to conditions unspeakably worse than those which prevailed before.

"It is not to be expected that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment will in itself end all these evils and restore public respect for law. I believe, however, that its repeal is a prerequisite to the attainment of that goal. I am informed that should repeal become effective, all the machinery for controlling the liquor traffic built up in the respective States and in the nation throughout the many years prior to the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment, would, with few exceptions, be in force, strengthened by various Federal laws and court decisions having to do with the regulation of interstate commerce.

Would Assure Proper Control

"Moreover, were the Eighteenth Amendment to be repealed, sufficient time ought to be given before repeal became effective to permit the various States through legislative action representing public opinion to set up such new safeguards or methods with reference to the handling of alcoholic beverages as seemed best calculated to insure adequate and proper control of the traffic in the interest of temperance, and at the same time safeguard the normal liberty of action of the individual.

"There are many who, feeling as I do that the Eighteenth Amendment has not accomplished the object which its enactment sought to attain, would willingly favor its repeal were some alternate method that gave promise of better results offered as a substitute. In my judgment it will be no difficult for our people as a whole to agree in advance on what the substitute should be, and so unlikely that any one method will fit the entire nation, that repeal will be far less possible if coupled with an alternate measure.

"For that reason I the more strongly approve the simple clear-cut position you are proposing to recommend and which I shall count it not only a duty but a privilege to support.

"My hope is that the tremendous effort put forth in behalf of the Eighteenth Amendment by millions of earnest, consecrated people will be continued in effective support of practical measures for the promotion of genuine temperance. To that cause my own efforts will ever be devoted.

"Very sincerely,

"JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR."

FIND CLUE TO DEAD GIRL

want you to go away. I am afraid."

Miss Hoyer said she left the party there after trying in vain to get Miss Calloway to accompany her and finally giving her her home address. That was about 11 o'clock.

2 MEN HAD GONE

At 12:30 Miss Hoyer said, she returned to the restaurant and found the two men had gone, leaving "Helen" and Miss Calloway together. She again tried to get Miss Calloway to go home with her, she said, but was unsuccessful and as she was leaving, five men arrived at the restaurant.

When the men entered, Miss Calloway called her back, she said, and tried to get her to remain, but she left.

She set the time of her final departure from the cafe at 12:40 a. m. It was only 70 minutes later, about 1:50, that the party had its tragic climax in Woburn.

WOMAN HEARD CALL

Culley was awakened about 1:45 a. m. by a girl's scream, he said. He heard the noise of auto brakes and a slight crash, he said. He walked from the inn to the road, about 150 feet, but saw no one, heard nothing more and returned to the inn.

Soon afterward, he heard cries and moans and again investigated with a searchlight and found the girl lying in the road, with her feet in a ditch.

His wife and Mrs. Clara Murton, who also live at the inn, told police that they had heard someone calling:

"Mac, Mac, are you there?"

AUTO WAS DAMAGED

The car apparently had been proceeding from the direction of Burlington toward Winchester, from north to south. The girl was found at a point opposite the Glendale farm. Fifty feet north of that her pocketbook, containing Miss Hoyer's address, and 50 feet further north was one of the victim's shoes.

At a spot opposite where the girl was lying, tire tracks caused by heavy application of the brakes, showed the car had swerved from the right to the left side of the road and scraped a fence. A motor meter and a bumper bolt were found by the fence.

HUNT CAMP CLUES

Colley heard a car speeding away after the crash so its occupants obviously made no attempt to determine the condition of the victim.

Dr. Stewart said the girl's injuries were not consistent with a hit-and-run auto case. Dist. Atty. Bishop went to the scene with State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neill. Chief Charles R. McCauley of Woburn began a check of Burlington and Billerica camps in the belief the auto party may have left from one of them.

INITIAL "K" ON KEY.

Other articles found in the roadway near the victim were three cigarettes, a pair of Oxford glasses on a gold chain, one pearl earring, the twin of which was still on the victim, and a key on a chain. The key was made by the Graham Mfg. Co. of Derby, Ct., and was stamped with the initial "K."

Police first believed the victim was Miss Hoyer and this suspicion was strengthened when they went to her home and found she was absent. Her brother, Harry, with whom she lives, was taken to the hospital, where Ressid the conference was that of no one he knew but that the handwriting on the paper was his sister's.

GIRL NEAR COLLAPSE

She had a cut on one arm and a bandage over a wound on one leg. When police read her a description of the victim, she nearly collapsed.

"It must be Jean Calloway," she said. "She lives in Worcester sq., but I don't know the number. I don't know who her people are and I don't know much about her. She told me she had two children and was separated from her husband.

TELLS OF DRINKING

"I saw her last night about 10:45 in a North End restaurant. She was with a man, and another girl, a blonde, and another man was with them. She was drinking.

"She said: 'Oh, Millie, where are you going?'

"I said: 'Why haven't you called me at my home,' and she said she had lost the address I had given her.

"The fellow with her was begging her to go with him. He said, 'You wanted wine and spaghetti and I gave it to you.'

"She said to me, 'Millie, don't leave me. I don't want you to go away. I am afraid.'

"The man said, 'I'm going to get you girls out of here and take you home.'

"I asked her to come home with me and she wouldn't come. I then left."

SAYS SHE WAS DRINKING

"I heard Jean say to Helen, 'I want you to stick with me because my mother likes you. She adores you.'

"Jean spoke French and Italian fluently. I believe she was of French descent.

"After I left I returned to the place about 12:30 or 12:35. Jean and Helen were still there, but the two men had gone. Jean wanted more wine. I didn't have much money, but Helen said she'd buy a bottle.

"I said, 'Jean, you don't need any more wine. I'm trying to get you home.' I pleaded with her to come home with me and she refused. So I left again.

TAKEN TO RESTAURANT

"When I was going out there were five or six men coming in. Jean called me back and asked me to stay with her. I told her the best thing she could do was to get out of the joint. She refused to come with me, so I went home."

After the identification and questioning in Woburn, Miss Hoyer was taken by Detectives O'Neill and Sherlock and Chief McCauley to the Thacher st. ressurant. Newspapermen who had previously been there had been told no girl of Miss Calloway's description had been there last night.

The victim weighed about 130 pounds, was of dark complexion and had dark brown hair. She wore a diamond ring, which may have been an engagement ring, a black dress, white straw turban, brown mesh stockings and brown and white sport shoes.

Rockefeller Shift Pleases Gov. Ely

Gov. Ely today expressed pleasure over the statement of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., calling for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The statement of Mr. Rockefeller," he said, "ought to annihilate any opposition to an immediate change in the status of prohibition. When a man of Mr. Rockefeller's previous associations and reputation emphasizes the need of a change, the drys can't say it's a position taken because of lack of moral appreciation of the virtues of prohibition."

ROCKEFELLER'S 'CONVERSION' SPLITS G. O. P.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 7 (INS)—The conversion of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., former "angel" of the Anti-Saloon League, to outright repeal of prohibition today tended to provoke a wet revolt against the prospective Republican compromise on a campaign plank favoring resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The Republican "elder statesmen" of the Senate favored a resubmission plank, but Rockefeller's pronouncement for repeal spurred the wets into demanding a repeal plank.

The fight may be carried to the floor of the Chicago convention, even if President Hoover endorses the resubmission plank.

Republican drys, led by Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho, vainly sought to stem the tide of sentiment for a resubmission plank as Borah critcized it as inviting the return of the open saloon and he chided the "elder statesmen" for advocating resubmission without proposing an alternative plan for controlling alcoholic liquor. He even threatened a revolt against the resubmission plan.

DRY THREATS IGNORED

All these dry threats failed to impress the wets, who were in raptures over Rockefeller's conversion to the repeal cause. The wets pointed out that Rockefeller had financed not only the Anti-Saloon League, but many other dry organizations.

"Obviously the costly experiment, which is the greatest wealth in America, has failed in the opinion of those who invested huge sums of money in an attempt to forcibly regulate the personal habits of a free and untrammeled people," said Senator Bingham (R.) of Connecticut, wet leader, in commenting on Rockefeller's announcement.

The Rockefeller statement disconcerted President Hoover's advisers, who have been urging adoption or a resubmission plank by the Republican party.

PROTEST BY BORAH

They thought they had won over the wets and were seeking to pacify the drys. The Rockefeller declaration served not only to provoke the wets in demanding outright repeal, but spurred the drys into attacking the resubmission plank.

Borah, who has acted as spokesman for the great dry organizations which supported Mr. Hoover in 1928, in a statement, deploring the resubmission plank, declared it failed to offer a substitute and would lead "straight to the front door of the American saloon."

"I say," said Borah, "we should be definite and certain, and there should be no dodging or hiding concealed purposes behind glittering generalities."

RETORT BY BINGHAM

To this, Bingham retorted:

"The feature of the resubmission plank is that it deals courageously with the prohibition issue. In direct opposition to the wishes of drys leaders, who are unwilling to have a referendum, it directly urges prompt action by congress to give to the people an opportunity to speak on the subject of prohibition."

The Senate "elder statesmen" meanwhile met again with Postmaster-General Brown and James P. Garfield of Cleveland, who will be chairman of the resolutions committee at the Republican convention. The "elder statesmen" objected to the plank proposing to resubmit prohibition to state conventions. They insisted that the amendment be passed upon again by state Legislatures.

WETS CHEERED BY SHIFT OF ROCKEFELLER

Drys Amazed and in Sharp Disagreement With His About Face on the Liquor Issue

New York, June 7 (AP)—Banners of jubiliation fluttered in the wet camp today, for John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a life-long dry, has decided that the 18th amendment ought to be deleted from the constitution.

The oil magnate's change of opinion, disclosed in a letter to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, brought expressions of amazement and sharp disagreement from supporters of the prohibition amendment, which Rockefeller and his father helped make the law of the land.

In expressing hope that both major parties would adopt repeal planks and remove the question from partisan strife, Rockefeller made it plain he had not altered his views on temperance.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W. C. T. U., commenting on the letter, asked:

"Will people who have refused to obey the prohibition law agree to obey the restrictions that may of necessity be a part of any other law?"

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said the amendment has been successful and that "certainly we do not purpose to exchange what we have—far better than the legalized traffic and saloon of the old days—for something that is unformulated and untried."

WETS ARE JUBILANT

Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, chairman of the Prohibition National Committee, declaring Rockefeller made "wild statements," said government figures show that "the source of liquor supply is not over 33 per cent what it was before," and that crime has decreased.

Dr. Butler, on the other hand, hailed Mr. Rockefeller's support and said it would have "a very great influence in the public opinion of the country."

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, praised the oil man for "courage," and Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said:

The Rockefellers join the great company of thoughtful American men and women who realize that the safety of our country requires that we correct this hideous mistake without any more delay."

BROKE WITH LEAGUE

Mr. Rockefeller was credited with a quiet, but effective part in the movement which culminated in adoption of the prohibition amendment. Though he was never a spectacular propagandist for prohibition, the dry forces, and particularly the Anti-Saloon League, regarded him as one of the greatest pillars.

There appears to be no record of any contributions by him to the Anti-Saloon League after 1925. It was about that time that he broke with the organization as result of irregularities exposed in the prosecution and conviction of William H. Anderson, New York state superintendent.

Anderson served a prison term in 1924 for third degree forgery and at that time Mr. Rockefeller demanded a full inquiry into the affairs of the league and in this connection he came to the support of Raymond B. Fosdick, who was in controversy with Anderson.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED

He challenged Anderson's charge that he was the victim of a "wet conspiracy," saying:

"If Mr. Fosdick is guilty of participation in any 'wet conspiracy' I am guilty, too, for he has represented me in this matter for two years, and I have fully approved of his every action and he has had and still retains my complete confidence."

G. O. P. Wet Plank Sure, Says New Jersey Leader

Newark, N. J., June 7 (AP)—E. Bertram Mott, chairman of the Republican state committee, a delegate to the Republican national committee, said today the Republican national platform would contain a "wet" plank.

He made his statement in commenting on the action of Mrs. George H. Miles, delegate-at-large to the convention, that she would not attend, unless President Hoover comes out for repeal of prohibition.

"President Hoover has not said he will not stand on the 'wet' platform," Mott asserted. "As a matter of fact, there will be a 'wet' plank, calling for resubmission of the prohibition question to the people."

Mrs. Dahlberg Charged $1700 for Family Tree

This is the question facing circuit court here, where the American Historical Society of Buffalo has filed suit against Mrs. Bror Dahlberg for $1700 in fees for tracing her genealogy.

Mrs. Bror Dahlberg

Baker Baldridge, attorney for the society, says the organization established Mrs. Dahlberg's right to belong to the Daughters of American Revolution—and then Mrs. Dahlberg refused to pay for the information.

The defendant once remarked that Chicago has nothing but a "washtub aristocracy."

Young Silent on Plan to Boom Business

Chicago, June 7—Owen D. Young, chairman of a recently-organized committee in New York to devise ways of stimulating employment and business, divulged the plans of the committee to a similar committee of Chicago bankers and industrialists but refused to let the public know what they were.

Owen D. Young

His conference with the Chicago committee was held in the Federal Reserve Bank headquarters, behind closed doors, and neither Young nor Edwell L. Avery, chairman of the Chicago committee, would discuss what transpired.

General Motors Head Has Tips for Congress

New York, June 7—Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corp., gave Congress a three-point program which he said offered a "possibility of sentiment improving in our business likewise."

Alfred Sloan, Jr.

The three points were: Stop waste and cut out every dollar of unnecessary expenditure, raise government income to the level of government expense, then adjourn.

The Problem

FROM the Capitol, at the crest of Pennsylvania ave., to the State House, at the crest of Beacon Hill, legislators have busied themselves with the problem of higher taxes—to take more money out of the pockets of the people.

The Remedy

THE $5,000,000,000 National Prosperity Bond Issue would revive business, put millions of men to work, put money into their pockets, make them buyers and consumers and enable them to pay their taxes to the government.

BONUS ARMY'S COURAGE STIRS ELSIE ROBINSON

MEN ARE FACING STARVATION IN 'TRENCHES'

By ELSIE ROBINSON

(Copyright, 1932)

Washington, June 7 (INS)—Four thousand veterans camping on the Washington wastes—7000 more ex-soldiers hurrying by foot, in trucks, box cars, flivvers, along every road that leads to Washington. The army that saved the country now marching on the capital.

That's news. Perhaps it's also history. Whichever it is, you're listening in and forming your opinion. All right, but before you do, there are certain facts you should have straight.

Whether we approve of them or don't, these men are not tramps. They are not Communists. They are not hoodlums or restless unemployed. They are representative American citizens — conservative, respectable, patriotic men—mechants, real estate dealers, lawyers, ex-bankers, union men in good standing. And they are here with a purpose.

One Visit Makes You Feel Cheap Indeed

Of course, there are some bums and radicals among them—bound to be. But in the main, they're solid citizens like you and I . . . living by the same ideals . . . heading for the same goals.

Regular folks—that's the thing that hits you so hard when you first see them. You go down to the dumps, "for a thrill," expecting to find a crowd of bums like you used to see in the hobo "jungles" across the railroad tracks. And with one glimpse that thrill is knocked out of you and you feel as cheap as a phoney nickel. For there, facing you, are your own people!

Men like your own father or husband, brother, sweetheart or son without shelter, rags on their backs, hunger in their eyes, but their jaws grim.

Orderliness of Men In Itself Is Ominous

The orderliness of the B. E. F. is the finest and the most hopeful—yet, at the same time, the most dangerous and ominous thing—about

New arrivals register at improvised "desks" in the open air at "Camp Camden" to participate in tonight's parade for the soldiers' bonus. Following the ceremony of placing their names and other data on the lists, the marchers are assigned to various camp sections according to the states from which they come. The entire system is carried on in accordance with rules and regulations that prevailed in World War times.

HUNGRY VETS ENJOY DONATION OF FISH

"We won't go hungry," the head of the army of soldiers' bonus marchers told Washington police as they prepared for tonight's big parade to the Capitol. This shows one of many typical groups preparing a bounteous fish dinner in an improvised camp before joining the main body in Camp Camden. The supplies for this dinner were donated by a Washington market, and other provision dealers throughout the city have contributed aid of a similar kind to various contingents of the marchers. (Int. BOSTON GANGDOM LED BY KING OF RACKETEERS

LEADER IS LIKE CAPONE IN HIS DOMINATION

Inside Story of Activities of the Mob That Rules in This Territory

By A STAFF REPORTER

(Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American)

Chicago has its Capone, and he is in prison.

Boston has its Racket King, and he is under surveillance by the United States authorities.

He is not a Capone, but he is as near an approach to "Scarface Al" as this section has produced.

Besides heading the biggest rum syndicate here, the Racket King exercises considerable control in crime in general—gambling, bond stealing, burglary, safe-cracking.

In what manner this control is exercised, I will tell shortly.

Here for the first time it is revealed that this individual has recently combined under his own banner several independent "mobs" with a promise of his protection for all, and an agreement by them to split their profits with him.

Rackets Exposed in Federal Investigations

Here it is also revealed that the Federal authorities have a fairly complete summary of his activities in a 31-page report, now stowed away in the files but which is intended to be brought forth eventually to blast him from his throne.

When that time comes his influence will receive its supreme test. Will it save him?

It is, perhaps, his biggest achievement, for if it proves successful it will make him in fact a czar. His activities will be many times more lucrative than in the past, and they have been far from profitless ventures.

In exchange for a certain percentage of the profits he has

BARE NEW PLOT AGAINST DUCE

Rome, June 7 (INS)—A new plot to slay Premier Benito Mussolini was uncovered today with the revelation that Domenico Bovone had confessed Parisian anti-Fascists had promised him $50,000 if he succeeded in killing the premier.

Sbardellotto also confessed his complicity in a plot, stating it had been hatched in concert with a number of political exiles in France and Belgium.

HERRIOT FAVORS DEBT PACT

Paris, June 7 (AP)—Premier Edouard Herriot today made a declaration for reciprocity in war debts and reparations negotiations in Lausanne June 16, and there was every indication he would receive a heavy vote of confidence from the Chamber of Deputies.

Herriot openedhi s Lausanne remarks with the statement his government would take a determined stand against violation of treaties and contracts between nations.

He left the way open, however, for negotiations with the statement he would be ready in discuss Lausanne "any project which on a basis of reciprocity seems likely to lead to greater world stability and peaceful reconciliation."

The Liberal left, he said, would base all its policies on a desire for international collaboration in both the economic and political spheres.

He pledged his government to immediate economies in the war department as an aid to the cause of disarmament.

He said there was an urgent necessity to found peace on the general organization of Europe and the world, and affirmed his faith in the League of Nations.

WARRANTS FOR 4 IN RELIEF FRAUD

Four warrants were issued by Judge Carr in Municipal Court today against fraudulent petitioners for city unemployment relief, alleged to have concealed bank accounts ranging from $200 to $1000.

The complaints were made by Officer Ernest F. Fanjoy, attached to the city welfare department, who withheld the names.

According to Hale Power, assistant corporation counsel, and William McCarthy, secretary of the welfare department, some of the fraudulent petitioners have made restitution. Others are being investigated.

According to Power as many women as men are attempting to mulct the city of relief.

The city's total for relief this year is $8,350,000, but new cases have brought the demand up to $12,400,000, with the possibility of a $4,000,000 deficit.

It has been estimated that about 1250 out of 25,000 men and women of the city's relief rolls are fakirs.

ADMINISTRATION ANGRY

They complained that Glassford's arrangements to bivouac the veterans had served to increase the numbers marching toward the capital while the administration was endeavoring to discourage the influx.

There has been criticism also of Glassford's action in going to the White House last week without knowledge or consent of the commissioners, to solicit aid for the veterans.

The police chief, nevertheless, has indicated to the commissioners that he intends to go ahead with his plans to house and feed the veterans until Thursday morning unless official orders are issued meanwhile for him to cease his activities.

EXPECT 8000 PARADERS

Under a blazing sun, veterans from many corners poured into the city today to swell the ranks of those now here who sought shelter under crude lean-tos in their encampments or beneath park trees.

The number under police care and feeding today was 5711 but police estimated that veterans in the city totalled "nearer 7000." Many of those who arrived yesterday had funds to care temporarily for themselves. Preparations for the veterans' parade up Pennsylvania ave. tonight—their first public demonstration—call for a probable number of 8000 paraders.

Feeding at the veteran encampments was continued under police and supervision from supplies bought yesterday and those purchased in anticipation of returns from a benefit sporting performance tomorrow night.

The search for Communist agitators within the ranks was redoubled and efforts were made to check their every activity. Vice President Curtis and Speaker Garner ordered a rejection of an application by the Workers Ex-Service Men's League, a Communist organization, to parade in front of the Capitol tomorrow to present demands for full payment of the bonus.

The league has a permit to parade, but the action of the two Hill leaders leaves them without a destination.

Commissioner Crosby is one of the three commissioners appointed by the President under which the affairs of the District of Columbia are administered. Glassford is responsible to him.

It also was said in informed quarters today that an official higher than the police chief was responsible for the issuance last night by Glassford of a statement charging that the Communists had organized a special unit to combat police and cause bloodshed at the parade scheduled here tonight by the bonus seekers.

Glassford said he was "reluctant" to issue such a statement.

"I already had laid plans, without specific orders, to handle the situation. The district commissioners, however, urged that I did so," he added. "I felt the situation did not warrant the statement."

Glassford is said to have told the district commissioners that his chief object in erecting rough shelters for the veterans was to keep them occupied and busy. Funds for food, he said, had been intrusted to his care by veterns' organizations and individuals and he considered it his duty to see that the money was properly expended.

"Sit tight!"

That's the slogan of the "bonus expeditionary force," which, when it was the A. E. F. with its goal at Berlin instead of Washington, sang the same philosophy in slightly different words:

"We won't be back 'til it's over 'over there'."

"Sit tight! I'll say we will," shouted an Illinois veteran, a graduate of Northwestern University, a certified public accountant, but whose shoes have big round rings of wear in the soles.

"We might be using canes soon, but we'll be here until 1945—if necessary."

MEDAL USELESS.

"Seventeen months, 16 days overseas," he says. "Private, first class, in the rear rank. That medal? That doesn't get me any food. They gave me it because I rescued my commanding officer. Within 40 meters of the German machine guns I carried him into a shell hole, remaining with him under continuous shell fire for more than an hour, except for twice carrying orders to passing tanks.

"I have a wife and child. It's three years since I've worked. My job was with a railroad, driving rivets in passenger car repair work. But if I don't get something—and if my bonus was paid in full I'd get $780—we'll lose our home for taxes. Come on, men, let's get going on this straw—"

12 YEARS IN ARMY

Yonder is a New Yorker, a married man with two children. He says he had 12 years of service in the army, 27 months of it overseas.

"I had a good job for 10 years, a 'white collar job'," he said. "They laid me off last September. Now my home is lost and my wife and children are camping with relatives. The $800 I'd get as a bonus would come in plenty handy."

Many of the men are married. Georga Kleinholz, regimental commander of the Oregon marchers, estimates that 90 per cent of his group are married and have all the way from one to five children to support. Most of them said they had not worked steady in two years. The average bonus payment they expect is $500.

U. S. FLAG OVER ALL

The American flag waves proudly over their out-door camp near the Anacostia river. Most of them sleep out in the open but when it rains they crowd in, standing up under crude, walless shelters erected for the first of the shock troops.

They wash down at the river, or in barrels. The foot-sore fill tins with water and sit by the hour, soaking their blistered feet. Smoke belches from army camp kitchens as of yore, while the K. P.'s slice onions or stir huge vats of sauerkraut.

GIBBONS IN BONUS CAMP

FLOYD GIBBONS W. WATERS

Floyd Gibbons, famous "headline hunter," war correspondent and radio speaker, went back to "war" scenes when he visited the camp of the bonus army on the banks of the Potomac and there addressed the veterans who by the thousands have marched on Washington. He is shown here with W. Waters, leader of the bonus marchers, in today's Boston Evening American, Gibbons tells you what the bonus march is all about and how it has Congress worried. CHILE TO SEIZE $375,000,000 U. S. CONCERN

Santiago, Chile, June 7 (AP)—The fate of Cosach, $375,000,000 American-controlled Chilean nitrate combine, vied for attention today from the new provisional government with the religious question and reports of a counter-revolt in the southern provinces.

The finance ministry in a statement said the government would not take any steps to confiscate the Cosach properties until after a committee of experts had made a thorough study of the nitrate problem and the matter had been submitted to the new Congress, which is expected to be convened in November.

Early today, however, the government issued a retraction of this statement, and this presumably left the Cosach matter as it was yesterday.

The first listing, Casper G. Asberg, state's attorney of Brookings County, South Dakota, and the last, Ernest M. Zwickel, in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Minneapolis, Minn., were two persons who had no namesakes in the book.

the whole performance. Riots ravel out on themselves. But these men are not rioters. There's an almost solemn quietness about them . . . a conscious, steely-eyed precision. The look of men getting ready . . . waiting . . .

They have formed a military organization—live as nearly as they can by military rule. They permit absolutely no radical talk, no panhandling, disorderly conduct or drinking.

They have established an intelligence service along army lines to ferret out any Reds or riot talk.

They are here to get the bonus and—they tell you quietly without any bombast or blustering—that they'll stay until they get it. Until 1945 if necessary.

"But suppose Congress adjourns?"

It's Their Idea and They Stick to It

Work? They have an attitude about work that startles you a little until you realize how logical it is. They don't want a dole of worst just as they don't want a dole of money or food. And they don't see why they should have to have it. They consider themselves the nation's ex-creditors—and they don't see why they shouldn't be treated with as much respect as Morgan, Mitchell or the Missouri Pacific.

Well, maybe that idea is cockeyed and again maybe it isn't. But the point is—it's their idea and they're sticking to it.

They won't work for less than union wages. If a man can't afford to pay that, they work for nothing at all—or just grub. There's a lot of criticism of this. But the B. E. F. say they are not scabs or moochers.

Two Starvation Meals a Day All They Get

How are they faring? Rotten. Regardless of the merits of their case, this is a mighty heartless—and perhaps a mighty dangerous—way for a big country to treat 10,000 human beings. Over in Anacostia Field—which is nothing more than a smelly, dirty flat down by the river bank—there are a few shelters stuck up on poles—no floors, no sides—no tents—no cots—no mess table. A few hundred are sleeping on bags filled with straw in a big garage, and a few hundred more in some other old buildings. Outside of that, they are just lying around on any strip of dirt they can find.

As for rations—here's what they had to eat Sunday. Two meals. For breakfast, black coffee and mush with a little milk stirred into it. At four, one weenie and some sourkraut. After Wednesday night, there won't be anything. They say they expect starvation before they're through.

Yes, I know. This isn't the way to talk in a newspaper column. But how are you going to talk about a thing like this—an incredible thing like this? As if it were a parlor game? I tell you, I'm worried. I feel sick. And if you don't—well, I wouldn't boast about it.

Five Are Held for Robbing Group of Bonus Marchers

Washington, Pa., June 7 (AP)—Charged with stealing the funds of 59 Dayton disabled war veterans, five men were held today.

The men according to L. B. Smith, commander of the Dayton aggregation en route to the Capitol, attacked him early today, beat him, took more than $100 belonging to the group and fled in one of the veterans' automobiles.

An hour later the men were arrested in Uniontown. The suspects gave their names as Earl L. Eddings, David W. Frantton, Ralph B. Legle, Ferdinand Bozello, and John Burtman. They had $73 with them.

They denied they had robbed Smith and said the money had been given them at the soldiers home in Dayton, where they lived.

The funds Smith says was taken from him was the entire sum the veterans had for food and fuel for their automobiles.

Prisoner Returns to Jail After Flight to See Wife

Rochester, N. H., June 7—Fred Leonard of Rochester Heights faces an additional sentence of 30 days because he ran away from the House of Correction at the Strafford County Farm to see his wife.

Leonard was sentenced to 90 days by Judge Gardner Hall in Rochester Municipal Court for keeping liquor for sale. While working around the grounds Leonard decided to pay a short visit home.

Two hours after he arrived, his wife called police headquarters and said he was ready to return. Leonard told Superintendent Upham at the farm he ran away to see his family.

BONUS MARCH ON CAPITAL TONIGHT

By the Associated Press.

Reinforcements marched, hooked rides and motored today toward Washington to lend their presence to the appeal for a $2,000,000,000 bonus for World War veterans.

In Washington it was parade day, with a touch of red offering a prospect of fireworks. Police there announced that a Communist plot to "combat the police with violence" had been discovered.

"Plans have been laid for organization of 100 men into a compact fighting unit to combat the police," said the police announcement of the plot.

To frustrate this possibility, Pennsylvania ave. was roped off so that the thousands of "Bonus Marchers," already here and arriving today from all parts of the country, might parade peacefully.

THOUSANDS ON WAY

Tonight's parade is by no means intended as the climax of the veterans' efforts to stir Congress to action in their behalf. Thousands of others are barely started from their distant homes to join the "army" here.

A bonus "expeditionary force" of as many as 2000 men, all properly identified by discharge papers as veterans, was to move from Los Angeles toward the capital on the other side of the continent. Rules for this "army" provide against panhandling, drinking, gambling, firearms or radical talk. Among them is one woman, Mrs. W. J. Hull. Her husband, she said, had been without work for two years.

FR. COX MAY SPEAK

Bonus Fleas Pester Congress

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Of course the newspaper fleas and the editorial writer fleas and beer tax and manufacturers' sales tax fleas—all of them tried to disturb him but the old dog was able to shake all of them off.

But, jumping dog biscuits! These bonus fleas stick closer than a dog collar and bite deeper than a chigger. They just won't let the old dog alone.

Escaped for Long Time While Others Squirmed

He scratched some of them off from that unreachable spot back of his ear only to find another colony of them digging into the small of his back. While he's trying to gnaw that bunch out, another tribe get under his collar and go to work.

Funny part of it all is that it is everybody's business—especially everybody who has been having his own flea trouble for the last three years. Boys and girls have been scratching like the very dickens to exterminate the depression fleas and get rid of the unemployment chiggers and feed the tax collector locusts—well, it has never made any of us any happier to see old Congressional dog Rover dozing away peacefully or occasionally clawing away foolishly over there on Capitol Hill, without a single worry in the world.

A Real Army With a Real Objective

That's why Rover's present antics to shake off the bonus fleas are sending a suppressed snicker right across the country. Misery likes company. Yes, sir, it might surprise some, but there's just lots and lots of people pulling for the fleas.

Now that's the way this bonus marcher business appears to me. That's why your old headline hunter slams out this broadcast from the Washington front.

These 4000 men camped along the Potomac are here to get an answer to a mighty serious question. They want to know why they've starving in the midst of plenty.

The people they've been sending to Congress to do things for them have let the boys down. So they've come all the way from Oregon and Texas and Wyoming and New York to get their answer first hand. The boys are certain the country is all right and the people are all right but something is wrong with the government.

All U. S. Soldiers and Heroes in 1917.

They are not bums. They are not agitators, although I can't think of anything more agitating to a fellow than sore feet and an empty stomach and no job and a wife and kids and the rent unpaid and—.

These men are citizens. They are veteran American soldiers. Some of them are disabled soldiers. We called them heroes when they sailed for France. Called them that again when they limped back with the bacon after the Armistice and found the country dry and some other fellow with their girl and somebody else in their old job.

They are also voters.

They are also workmen—steel workers—coal miners—structural iron workers—cowboys—stenographers—newspaper reporters—dairymen—shopkeepers without shops—clerks—farmers—well, they are just American people like you and me. Walking with them—you get just that idea—they are just like you and me and, by golly, they are just as puzzled as we are about what has happened to the good old U. S. A.

Resent Legislators' Ignorance of Duty

No, sir, they don't know any more about it than our big statesmen who denied the existence of the depression. No more than our big financiers and bankers and Wall Street operators who used to be considered the prosperity brains of the country. And no more apparently than our government knows what it is all about.

And right there is where they have a kick coming.

They say it wasn't their business to know.

No more of their business than running the A. E. F. in France.

That was Pershing's job. The job of these men was to kill or be killed. They never knew where they were going and never asked. That was Pershing's job.

He ran the show. They carried out his orders. He took them over and he brought them back. He ran the show.

He didn't stop in the middle of the Battle of the Argonne and say, "I'll be doggoned if I know what to do next and it's just too bad, but I think a lot of you fellows better begin learning to speak German or French or something because you have got to shift for yourself."

That's the way they "figger" it out in soldier language.

Good Country, but Management Is Poor

Now, they say the same thing about the government. They tell me, they tell everybody that they think the country is all right. Nature has been good to us. We can produce all the food and coal and fruit and beef and clothing that we need. We can build all the houses and beds and furniture that we need. The banks are full of money. The grain elevators are full of wheat.

And the people are all right. They are all hard-working people, only too anxious to work and take care of themselves and their families and clothe their kids and send them to school—yes, the people are all right and the country is all right, but by golly, something has gone wrong with the management.

It is neither looking toward nor wishing for an overthrow of government. It believes the government is all right. It does not forget that this same government has worked pretty well through many tough times before, but what it does not know and what it wants to know and what it is here in Washington to find out is whyinell the responsible representatives of this government, of this people and this country, can't run the thing.

Starving in Washington No Worse Than at Home

They intend staying in Washington until they find out. Starvation and exposure in Washington is no more painful than it is back where they came from. They are digging in.

Little committees of them—twos and threes—are calling on the Congressmen and asking them polite and respectful questions. There are no threats, no disorders, no menace. Just seriousness.

These groups of bewildered veterans were all over Capitol Hill today interviewing Congressmen and Senators and walking through the hall of Congress and sitting on the marble steps and looking at the statues of the past great and just trying to find out what's the matter with Congress.

Yes, sir, the fleas are in old Congressional dog Rover's hide and he's mighty busy scratching. Looks like he's going to be busier.

EXPERTS WORK AT MEANS TO COLLECT TAX

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Treasury tax experts went into conference in the office of David Burnet, commissioner of internal revenue, today to begin the work of drawing up regulations under which the new $1,118,500,000 tax bill will be administered.

As fast as these are determined, they will be made public to enable the tax payers to learn in advance just how they must pay.

Commissioner Burnet expects it to be a week or longer before the regulations are compiled. Until then no government offical can say just how the taxes will be collected.

Here are the pertinent facts about the new law:

Here are some of the rates: Automobiles, 3 per cent; candy, 2 per cent; electrical energy, 3 per cent on sales for domestic and commercial purposes; gasoline, one cent a gallon; checks, two cents each.

First-class postage increased to three cents, effective within 30 days.

The method of collecting the new duties will be announced soon by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Bossy Gillis Sued for $25,000 Damages

Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, former mayor of Newburyport, today was made defendant in a $25,000 suit filed in Salem court by Benjamin Checkoway, also of Newburyport.

Checkoway based his suit on the publication of an article in Asbestos, weekly newspaper conducted by Gillis, in which reference was made to a fire in an unoccupied housed owned by Checkoway.

Court Forbids Milk Embargo in Clinton

A temporary injunction, restraining the Board of Health of Clinton from enforcing a ban on milk produced, placed in containers or distributed outside an eight-mile area, was issued today by Judge Hammond in Suffolk Superior Court. The injunction was asked by the Whiting Milk Companies.

Everett Boy Drowns in Medford Pond

Joseph White, 17, of 4 Grover st., Everett, was drowned while swimming in Wright's pond in Medford today. The body was recovered by police after several hours. Identification was by the boy's sister.

HOOVER LAY-OFF PLAN DEFEATED IN SENATE

Washington, June 7—The administration proposal that federal workers be given a month's furlough without pay instead of a direct salary slash was defeated today in the Senate after Senator Moses (R) New Hampshire, fought for its adoption.

By its action the Senate indicated it intends to retain the 10 per cent horizontal salary slash for the next fiscal year which it approved Saturday on recommendation of the special economy subcommittee.

The vote on the Moses substitute for furlough instead of a pay cut was 41 to 36.

Narcotic Seller Is Put on Probation

John Donahue, alias William Pratt, of Cambridge, was given a suspended sentence today of two years in the penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., for violating the Harrison narcotic act.

Donahue pleaded guilty to the sale of 37 grains of morphine and to another indictment for sale of 19 grains of morphine. He was put on probation for two years.

Hero and Rescued

Harold Sinclair Carl Mossberg

Harold Sinclair, 11, of Cranch st., Quincy, and Carl Mossberg, 11, also of Cranch st., whom he rescued from drowning in a Quincy quarry hole. The boys were sailing boats when Carl fell in. Harold dived in, fully clothed, and dragged the other boy to shore.

Mrs. Goddard Wins Divorce in Reno

Reno, Nev., June 7 (INS)—The romance of Evelyn Cole Goddard and Amory Goddard, Boston social registerites, came to an end here today when Mrs. Goddard was granted a divorce at a private trial on grounds of cruelty. They were married in Rome, Ga., in 1926 and have a two year old daughter.

JURY IN MALDEN LIQUOR PROBE TOMORROW

The Middlesex grand jury's independent investigation of liquor conditions, with relations to Malden police activities, will begin tomorrow, it was learned today.

Thirty-three witnesses are being summoned, 17 by Harold R. Akers, Malden alderman, who is foreman of the jury, and 16 by Dist. Atty. Bishop, who recently cleared two Malden liquor officers of charges of "framing" a defendant after an investigation by State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neill of charges.

One woman is among those summoned. She is Eva Locke of Burlington, whose connection with the case is not known.

Akers list includes Harry and Milton Weiner, the former the defendant allegedly "framed," and Daniel Morrison, now serving a sentence for perjury, who once acted as a police informer and made the original charges. On it also is the name of Asconio Di-Biago, former court interpreter, whose report of an investigation he made with the State detectives he sought. Another witness is Asst. Dist. Atty. McCabe, who was Weiner's counsel.

On Bishop's list are Sergt. Joseph Henry and Patrolman William J. Butler, the Malden officers vindicated by the district attorney; the State detectives and Malden police executives. Asst. Dist. Atty. Crafts will go before the jury during the probe.

SAVE BOY'S LIFE FOURTH TIME

Harold Sinclair, 11, of 80 Cranch st., Quincy, has more than his share of courage, and Carl Mossberg, 11, of 51 Cranch st, has more than his share of good fortune.

Sinclair risked his life last night to rescue Mossberg from a Quincy quarry hole. It became known today. Incidentally, it was the fourth time Mossberg has been rescued from the same quarry hole in nine years.

With several other boys, they were sailing boats and when Mossberg's went away from shore he leaned over and fell in. He can't swim. The water there is 100 feet deep.

While the other lads stood paralyzed, Sinclair jumped in, fully clothed, pulled his playmate to shore and then rolled the water out of him and took him home.

GARNER BACKS MAYORS' PLEA

Washington, June 7 (INS)—Federal aid for the great cities of the nation that are facing financial and relief problems was endorsed today by Speaker Garner of the House.

Receiving a delegation of seven city executives, Garner said most of the mayors' requests were met in his $2,000,000,000 relief programs to be voted on in the House late today.

In the party were Mayors Curley of Boston, Hoan of Milwaukee, Miller of Cleveland, Anderson of Minneapolis, A. Miles Pratt, representing Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans and City Manager Welsh of Grand Rapids.

Mayor Curley made a vigorous appeal for a $5,000,000,000 construction program. He asserted that the mere announcement of the government that it would begin spending that amount on construction projects would be magical.

"Unless the government does something in a big way, and at once, there is great danger of a revolution," he said. "I look with fear upon the winter of 1932 and the beginning of a new year. Unless something is done, you will have one out of every three people in the country living on charity."

HOUSE NEARING SHOWDOWN ON GARNER BILL

Washington, June 7 (AP)—Congress progressed today in relief legislation, with the House verging on a showdown on the Garner program.

That section of the Senate Democratic bill allowing $300,000,000 for loans to States to meet destitution was approved by the Senate banking committee.

Whether to accept the drastic procedure sought by the House Democrats to jam through the $2,-300,000,000 Garner plan was debated in the House.

If this fails, the bill may be laid wide open for amendment, but if it succeeds, the administration will lack any chance there to seek to substitute the Hoover plan.

MORE DESPERATE THAN WAR

Pleading for the adoption of Garner's plan, Rep. Bankhead of Alabama said:

"There has not been a moment more tense in the history of the United States than that provided by the present economic and unemployment situation.

"The bill of Speaker Garner does not meet with the approval of all members of either party, but it is an emergency measure designed to give temporary relief in the speediest and most universal manner."

He said present conditions were more desperate than World War days and required desperate measures.

"MONSTROUS PORK BARREL"

Rep. Purnell of Indiana, speaking to the House minority, chided Democrats for supporting a bill to "unbalance the budget in less than 24 hours" after the passage of the $1,000,000,000 revenue bill.

He charged Democratic leaders with "hog-tying their members before leading them in the chamber to vote for a gigantic and monstrous pork barrel."

The nation is not able to withstand the financial drain of Garner's relief plan, Purnell concluded.

Lynn Youth Dies by Septic Poisoning

Henry D. Ainslie, 22, son of the Rev. James E. Ainslie, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church on Maple st., Lynn, died today at the Deaconess Hospital, Boston, of septic poisoning.

Ainslie, who was to have been graduated from the Boston University School of Business Administration next week, was prominent in college activities, being editor of the college year book.

5-BILLION LOAN BOOMED BY CLUB OF WORKINGMEN

Congress was called on to do its duty and pass the $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan, by Dr. Herbert L. McCarthy of Quincy, Republican candidate for Governor's Council, at a mass meeting of the Workingmen's Club of Suffolk County on Boston Common last night.

"The idea of doing something in a big way to help this country out of its present crisis, has been the aim of the ablest minds in America," s'id Dr. McCarthy.

LAUDS HEARST PLAN

"Of the many plans advanced, one emanated from the fertile mind of that great American, William Randolph Hearst, and will be adopted by the federal Government in part at least.

"The $5,000,000,000 federal loan should be adopted and then the money wisely spent on needed projects which will give employment to many. With the spending of this vast sum, economy should be practiced wherever possible.

"Prior to spending any of this money by the nation, states or municipalities, competitive bidding on all contracts should be insisted upon."

LEADERS SPEAK.

The meeting was called to order by Nicholas A. Loumos, who presented President Augustus Seaver of the club as permanent chairman of the meeting.

Other speakers were Theodore A. Glynn, chairman of the Boston street commission; Dr. Ray H. Shattuck, candidate for secretary of state; Mary E. Gallagher, Thomas J. Hannon, Jr., Leo Sgnatrito, Andrew Canavan and President Seaver. Miss Sheila O'Donovan Rossa closed the meeting by singing the "Star Spangled Banner."

M'LEAN RITES TOMORROW

Simsbury, Conn., June 7 (AP)—George P. McLean, 74, former governor and United States senator, intimate friend of Calvin Coolidge, and one of the largest landowners in Connecticut, died suddenly yesterday after a heart attack.

Since his retirement in 1925 he had taken little part in political life, but devoted his attention largely to the development of his 1850-acre estate as a game preserve and breeding place for thoroughbred cattle. Mr. Coolidge visited him frequently to fish in the stocked streams on his land, coming here last about four weeks ago.

Funeral services will take place at 3 p. m. Wednesday in the Simsbury Congregational Church, where his grandfather officiated as pastor for more than a half century. His widow, Mrs. Juliette Goodrich McLean, and a sister, Mrs. Sally Pratt McLean Greene, Lexington, Mass., authoress, survive.

THOMAS MEETS WITH VALERA

Dublin, June 7 (AP)—President De Valera and James Geoghegan, his minister of justice, talked for an hour today with two members of the British Cabinet about the differences between the two countries.

J. H. Thomas, British secretary for dominions, and Lord Hailsham, secretary of war, came from London last night with the primary purpose of arranging a meeting of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and De Valera, who is going to London Friday.

The two British visitors were smiling as they left the conference. Apparently they were pleased with the results of the meeting, but Thomas declined to say anything.

Wet Leads for U. S. Senate in Carolina

Charlotte, N. C., June 7 (AP)—Sweeping aside North Carolina's proverbial dryness and the political prestige acquired by Senator Cameron Morrison over a period of 20 years, Robert R. Reynolds, a wet, today held a commanding lead with but a few scattered precincts unreported in the State Democratic United States Senate primary. Reynolds had 144,562 votes to Morrison's 136,196.

Janitor Gets $5750, Principal $4000 in Chicago School

Chicago, June 7 (AP)—There's at least one school in Chicago where it's more profitable to be janitor than principal.

Dr. George D. Strayer, Columbia University expert who has made a survey of Chicago schools, told a meeting of 4000 teachers yesterday the head janitor of one school was paid $5750 and the principal $4002.

In a recent report Dr. Strayer recommended to the board of education that salaries of all janitors be cut 21 per cent.

Premier MacDonald Returns to London

FOUR STARVING BABES RESCUED

Chicago, June 7 (AP)—Four under-nourished children, clothed in rags and trembling with fear, were rescued today from the fanatical mother, who had held them prisoners at home six months.

The mother, Mrs. Edna Scherer, 40, fought off police for half an hour with an axe before she could be subdued and taken to Psychopathic hospital. Two of the children—Henry, 18 months old, and Charles, three years—had not been out of the house for six months and were found in the basement.

Neighbors said Mrs. Scherer feared social welfare workers, who called at the house, but were consistently repulsed, would harm the children. Four of her other children are in orphanages.

Wales Retires Cora and Gets Him a New Little Cairn Pet

London, June 7 (INS)—The Prince of Wales has a new dog. Cora, the tiny Cairn terrier, favorite pet and companion of the Prince for years, has gone into retirement and spends her time at Fort Belvedere, the Prince's Sunningdale home.

Jacques is the name of the usurper, an even smaller Cairn, which enjoys a special corner in Wales' private aeroplane.

When the Prince has been away in the past, Cora has been a serious problem. During his African tour three years ago, she fretted so much the Queen took her to Buckingham Palace, and even the company of her companions, John and Hamish, could not console her for the absence of her master in South America last year.

Waltham Man Hurt in 22-Foot Fall

U. S. LABOR FOR HEARST PLAN

Washington, June 7 (USI)—Organized labor whole-heartedly indorses William Randolph Hearst's proposal for a $5,000,000,000 prosperity bond issue, E. F. McGrady, legal representative of the American Federation of Labor, declared yesterday in a radio broadcast. The speaker over WOL commended Mr. Hearst for his far-sightedness in proposing the prosperity bond issue many months ago and declared it has the indorsement of outstanding economists. He said that if Mr. Hearst's advice had been taken at the time it was given "we would not now find ourselves sinking deeper into the national quagmire of despair and resentment."

Actors in Budapest Now Street Beggars

BRINGING HOME THE PAUSE THAT REFRESHES

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Answer!

Why do I love you, nasty world,
And hate the thought of dying.
Though every hope is downward hurled,
And failure follows trying?

My every scheme has been a flop;
And life, in mood pedantic,
Has taught me I'd do well to stop
My aspirations frantic

Why don't I quit you, nasty world?
Ah, well! I know the answer;
I'm just a biped vertebrate
Whom nature, mad to propagate,
Has taught to view demise with hate.
"Paws" synonyms with "man," sir.

—INSPECTIOUS IMMANUEL.

Lifted From Life:

One of Boston's land-mark jewelry firms is conducting a drastically marked-down sale . . . A week or so ago, one of the funniest of Beacon Hill shoppers sought out one of the firm's newest clerks to show her something in diamond bracelets . . . She looked at one beauty—all diamonds . . . After a hour or more she finally decided to take the trinket . . . Asked the price . . . The clerk told her . . . She looked at the tag hurriedly and answered, "It's marked down to $700" . . . The Pussy One departed with her purchase . . . When the new clerk was putting the tray of bracelets back in the vault he noticed there was a $700 bracelet still there. He more cautiously examined the new offering and he'd removed from the Pussy One's purchase . . . He hadn't noticed that there was an indistinct figure 1 between the 7 and the 7 . . . Panicky and shaking he realized that he'd just sold a $1700 bracelet for exactly a grand less than it was supposed to be sold for! . . . He didn't know what to do . . . He brooded over it that night . . . Trying to muster up courage to tell his boss of his great mistake . . . Bright and early the next morning the Pussy One entered the store . . . To return the purchase and have it credited to her account . . . Never was an "exchange-customer" more warmly greeted . . . The young man all but hugged her . . . And didn't even mind one bit the said drop . . . She returned this bracelet because I'm positive that for $700 I didn't get much of a bargain" . . . Not-a-bit, Miss Pussy One! . . . You only had a chance to hang on to a bracelet that had originally been worth $3000 before the sale—all for a mere $700!

About the Town:

Marietta's host of Hub friends will wear down the "Met's" stage-doorstep beginning June 17 . . . Auburn-haired switchboarder Peggy McGrathan of WBZ's studio provokes those looking-twice glances! . . . Chandler Goss of the old "300 Club" with genial Charlie Dooley at Manomet Point's Mayflower now . . . With all those extra, seeing for a couple of weeks for "no" and divers other economic novelties now it's a "Public Happiness" week, they'll "celebrate" beginning the 25th! . . . Alston's Kay Munyon still cares only for Brookline's Dan O'Connell . . . even though it's a long way between Alston and England, where Dan's taking about those eight feature pictures (including Paramount's "Madison Square Garden") that their Big Brother Charlie is directing! . . . It's on again, that hot-flames love song between Sally McPhee and Wellesley's John McLean . . . With sister Betty McPhee issuing Phil (Paramount Theatre's asst. manager) De Petro's tried but true heart! . . .

Lookin' Thru the Mail:

To Dorchester's E. Lamont: If that isn't a true story it's cute anyhow . . . The new almost sure walking thing the street and seeing a young chap come head first through a window . . . Home head buried through the glass by his fiancee's mother, who was acting on the principle that youth must have its fling!

To "Fastest Reader": 97 summer st.? Now if you've been really reading our columns you must know that no more pepful such vagile items as the one you submitted . . . Terribly sorry, but we have to know all the names, etc . . . Try again . . .

To Clittondale's E. Mansfield: We liked that joke of yours, but it's a bit too tangy for our censorship board to pass on . . . Send another . . .

To Randolph's Marie J. Murphy: Thanks. Why not issues on those Randolph bachelors?

To "Johnny Ace": Awww! Johnnie, you wouldn't be kidding us about that name leader now would you? Thanks for your bouquet for the daily effort . . .

To James V. (Dorchester): Did you see the poem here? . . . Many of our readers liked it. How about more? Keep the ship up! . . . After all, Anita Loos wrote two gentlemen preferred—you know! . . .

To Dorchester's Mary Blackwell: Afraid some church devotee might not think your joke as clever as we did . . .

To Chelsea's Francie I. Brickman: Your short story reminding, but where was the punch line? . . . Try again . . .

To Somerville's Dreamful Folmon Reading: Why waste two reels on a stamp seeking, trivial information? There ponders more would buy a tasty loaf of bread for some starved man . . . We're more than pleased to answer any reader's inquiries when they want something!

To Newbury's x. W. Saleem: What a swell shopper you must be for you can sense a bargain at such a glance, sales girls at want ads . . . Your mention of the four-poster beds in the furniture sale and wondering if gangsters call only for those with pineapple tops "swoons"? . . .

"As You Desire Me" on Orpheum Bill Friday

"As You Desire Me" brings Greta Garbo to the screen at Loew's Orpheum starting Friday in a film adaptation of the sensational Luigi Pirandelle play. The new vaudeville bill brings Seed Austin, well-known comedienne, as headliners in their skit, "Success." The famous Spanish clown, Pepito, will be another important headliner.

DRAMA DISCUSSED By Nicholas Young

Many Show Treats for Summer

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

In a manner all its own, the legitimate theater about this time of the year packs up its belongings, deserts the cities and sets up tents in wide open spaces. With the closing of the Plymouth next Saturday, when "Phantom Cargo" departs for points unknown, there will be a great emptiness in this city in that form of art known as the spoken drama. There will be none whatever.

* * *

However, before the month is out, there will spring up in nearby regions on the south, among the scrub pines and glistening sands of Cape Cod, a number of worthwhile experiments in the business of setting stages and presenting plays. It is an annual gesture in the interest of a languishing theater. The operations this year will extend from the lip of the Cape Cape Provincetown to its broad shoulder at West Falmouth, with an important stopover at Dennis. In these affairs of the theater, which have become closely associated with social life along the South Shore, credit for its growth must go first to the Wharf Players of Provincetown. These were the pioneers. They laid a course in rough waters and held to it, with the result that a flourishing business in entertainment became a firmly fixed summer institution.

* * *

Then came the Cape Playhouse at Dennis and the University Players at West Falmouth. The latter, outgrowing a collegiate impulse, have turned professional and this season will blossom forth under the new title of The Theater Unit. A season of 18 weeks in repertoire in Baltimore during the winter has given these boys and girls new ideas. They will enter upon a season of 11 weeks on Monday, June 27, and will bring to light three new plays . . . The Black Flamingo," "Old Friends" and "Peep Show." Among the productions planned is Aristata, which could hardly be expected to pass the strict censorship of Mr. John M. Casey and will not, therefore, be available for presentation here. It is reported that the Theater Unit successfully pleased and shocked Baltimore with this rippling old Greek comedy for three weeks.

* * *

The activities at the Cape playhouse in Dennis will start on June 6 with "The Swan," by Jullet," and for its principal roles Tom Powers, Violet Heming and Spring Byington have been engaged. It has been a policy of the Cape playhouse to present seasonal drama successes with the original Broadway casts. This same idea will prevail during the current season, circumstances where the casts are changed, players of equal prominence to the original will be engaged. In many respects the Cape playhouse presents a more ambitious program for July and August than its nearby rivals.

* * *

If you care to take a sea ride for your drama, Nantucket bids you cordial welcome. The Nantucket Players will open at its season on July 4 and will function as a stock company, occupying the auditorium of the Nantucket Yacht Club.

Jimmy Durante

"I gotta cinch," he declares, "I read the lines, and if I forget you in the scene I just go ahead and say anything, then apologize to the director afterward and tell him I'm mortified. Usually I get by with it."

SCREEN STARS WHOSE POPULARITY CONTINUES TO GAIN

Greta Garbo, Albert Conti and Roland Young in "As You Desire Me," at Loew's Orpheum on Friday.

Lawrence Olivier and Ann Harding in a scene from "Westward Passage," the current screen attraction at RKO Keith's. Many patrons of the memorial theater acclaim it one of Ann's best Roles.

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, June 7.—The Plaza Hotel is one of the most progressive hostelries in the motion picture capital. They've just installed a new gum-vending machine which is very popular with the guests. It's connected with the switchboard so that when you drop a nickel in the slot the operator can give you the wrong flavor.

Fine Arts Offers the Smartest of All Musical Films

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"A Nous La Liberte," at the Fine Arts, is the smartest and jolliest satire ever seen in the cinema. It is the best of the musical films, and undoubtedly has already hung its hat on the rack set apart for the world's 10 best pictures of the year. Its technique is revolutionary—it is a movie that should swiften the pace of all studio output in time. In short, it is a Rene Clair production—that Parisian name is now become the label for screen superexcellence.

* * *

Still another highlight: still another feather in the cap of the maker of "Sous les Toits de Paris" and "Le Million."

His latest achievement is what one might call the first of international pictures out of the sound sheet. The glory of the old silent drama was worldwide in its appeal; with the addition of the human voice in the form of speech, tones, laughs, of video or vista values, but gains a vigor that is telling and refreshing. One might compare the giant Antaeus to the motion picture, and say that Clair, the creative genius, had brought him down to earth, and then raised him up, for a gain of seven-fold vitality.

"A Nous La Liberte" is a most diverting tale, with a hackneyed of good music and occasional song, of a couple of rascals who break jail. One of them returns; the other sets himself up in business, and becomes a captain of industry. He is finally unmasked, but not until he has furnished the screen with much that should rock the world with laughter. But behind the fun is the keen thrust of satire. Human institutions and beings are debunked with merciless hand. You shake with laughter, but you are feeling the bite of this burlesque upon mankind and its conduct.

Throughout the cast is notable. These Frenchmen sure can pantomime to perfection. Henri Marchand and Raymond Cordy, as the prison pals, are superb. But the whole personnel shines; even the minor characters are expertly handled.

Rene Clair is supreme in the making of film musicals. And the merit of his technique makes one know he will some day turn out a "straight" gem of surpassing excellence.

Exeter Theater

Richard Dix in "The Lost Squadron," and Dorothy Mackaill, in "Love Affair," are the attractions for today and tomorrow at the Exeter. The last half of the week Bill Boyd will be seen in "Carnivale Boat." Spencer Tracy in "Sky Devils," will also be shown.

Roland Young to Supplant Frank Morgan in Cast for Al Jolson's Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor.

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, June 7.—A scant month ago we burst into print with a eulogy on Frank Morgan. The eulogy still goes but the Morgan role in Al Jolson's picture is out. Irving Thalberg signed Frank Morgan but he has a part for him at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that prevents his playing in "Hallejuah, I'm a Bum."

* * *

Roland Young, who has always been in the mind of Harry D'Arrast and Mr. Jolson, to say nothing of Joseph Schenck, for the Jolsons, has agreed to come home. Perhaps I shouldn't call America home in such a hyphenated - in - the - tool English-sense as Roland Young.

Louella O. Parsons

Amos and Andy Cartoons

I am greatly interested in an idea that Frank Joyce, Hollywood agent, is promoting. He is put Amos and Andy under contract and is arranging for them to make a feature and a number of cartoons. The cartoons will be on the Mickey Mouse order.

* * *

Wally and Jackie Apart

Alas and alack, Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper will not be together again for several months.

Colleen Moore

Wallie is being put immediately into "Flesh" with Robert Leonard directing. "Flesh" will be of special interest to the fans, for it will mark Colleen Moore's return to the screen after an absence of many months. Wally Beery and Clark Gable have been away together fishing, and both of them were summoned in return to the studio. Clark to begin work on "China Seas," which he will do before he goes to Paramount, and Wally to start work in "Flesh."

Chatter in Hollywood

The New York debutante, Marion (Tim) Lansing, brought out here as a member of Howard Hughes' yachting party, is wearing a diamond sparkler. Miss Lansing has confined to a few of her friends that this mere bauble that is something like 10 carats means marriage. Mr. Hughes, who has been one of our best known Hollywood film producers, met Miss Lansing on his recent visit to New York. Her debut last winter at the Ritz, I am told, was one of the most talked of events of the season. Just when the wedding will take place Miss Lansing has not announced.

Snapshots of Hollywood

Scollay Show Revival Week Has Snap

The snappy Alexander and Santos Revue headlines an entertaining vaudeville bill at the Public Scollay this week. The revue is pleasingly different. It opens with an adagio team that works in perfect rhythm, followed by a sister team with fast tap dancing. The bright spot was really a male team who do a burlesque of Russian ballerinas, It is a comedy "riot."

The balance of the bill, while varied, features comedy. Closely pressing the headliners for honors is Raynor Lehr, a comedy dancer, who has gained a notable reputation in talking "shorts."

McGrath and Deeds engage in a battle of wits. Their patter is only a part of their entertainment—the rest is song. The comedy is at its best with a burlesque female impersonation. Angus, Keats and Company are two sets of twins who start their honeymoons aboard a Pullman car.

Jack Fulton and Peggy Parker have a singing and talking act that is best described by its title, "Diversion." The Four Juveniles do acrobatic dancing. Tosa Sippon and her Seven Syncopators are a novel Oriental string orchestra that features Miss Yana in a version of the Cuban Love Song."

Marion Davies Film

Edmund Goulding, who last directed "Grand Hotel," will direct Marion Davies in her next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring film, "Good Time Girl." This is an original screen story by Frances Marion, with dialogue by Anita Loos.

Revival Week at State

For the week beginning next Friday, Loew's State temporarily departs from its regular picture policy to usher in a Gala Revival Week for four of the most popular screen hits of the past two years. The first attraction will be "Let Us Be Gay," which costars Norma Shearer and Maria Dressler. The remaining three attractions for the week are on Sunday and Monday, during which will be shown Wallace Beery and Clark Gable in "Hell Divers," with Conrad Nagel, on Tuesday and Wednesday, Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in "Possessed"; for Thursday only, Helen Hayes in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," chosen as one of the 10 best pictures of 1931, and Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in "Beau Hunks."

LITTLE O' THIS AND THAT FOR A CHANGE

The old swimming hole where Dad, a red-headed, freckled-faced, barefoot boy with a hole in the seat of his pants, used to swim 30 years ago lies up there in the lap of the hills, 40 miles away, fed by mountain springs and screened by the pines, birches and alders. Many times has Dad told the youngsters of it. Passing by the lane leading to it last Sunday, the boys begged for a swim in it. The 700-acre property of mixed farm and woodland is now owned by two wealthy men and is posted profusely with "No Trespassing" signs. So little Martin was sent to the manor house, more than a quarter of a mile away, to courteously ask if he and Tom, age 12 and 10, could have a swim in Dad's old swimming hole. Little Martin carefully explained why he was so anxious for a dip in that woodland pool and how, after 10 minutes of splashing and paddling it, they would leave and hit the long trail for Boston to tell the rest of the gang of their wonderful adventure.

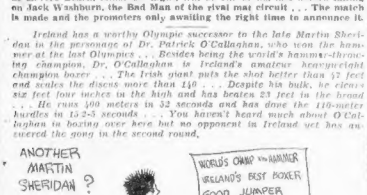
"I cannot give you permission," was the stony-hearted answer. But, inasmuch as the pool was far from the house, and the entrance to it an old cow path, and it was hidden in the woods where no one could see or be annoyed, Dad decided to give the boys their wonderful treat anyway. Shoes and stockings and little shirts were off when the owner burst through the bushes, face red with wrath. "Get out!" The laugh he died on the lips of the lads and the glad smiles left their faces. In his breast Dad's heart was boiling. He was afraid to speak. He knew that if he let go of himself one bit that owner would go into the pool—and stay there! And so Dad and the boys left the old swimming hole.

Kneeling at his little bed that night, Martin was saying his prayers. "Please, God," he prayed, "forgive that man who wouldn't let us have a swim in Dad's old swimming hole. Please, God—forgive the meanest man in the world."

On the outside looking in it is easy to criticize the doings of those on the inside looking out . . . Uncle Wilbert Robinson used to call fans and writers not familiar with inside stuff, "grand stand managers" and "swivel chair bosses" . . . Running the risk of being put in the category of the grand stand managers, we nevertheless find it hard to see how the Red Sox benefited by letting a pitcher like Danny MacFayden go to the Yanks for a couple of pitchers like Ivy Andrews and Henry Johnson . . . Still Bob Quinn and Shano Collins may know something we fans do not . . . Until we know that something we shall continue to think the Sox either got the worst of the bargain or the deal was only a part of a bigger and more profitable one to come.

It speaks well for the managerial ability of Bill McKechnie to have the Braves up front with only two regulars, Urbanski and Worthington, hitting more than .300 . . . Batting averages are deceiving . . . Giants and Phillies, down at the bottom of the standings, are leaders in club batting . . . Dick Dunn is back from Detroit with a string of auto racing entries that makes the coming race meet at Rockingham loom up like the Indianapolis or Dayton speed carnivals . . . Charlie Strack's appearance against Boris Demeteroff in Aleck MacLean's big wrestling show at Revere Beach, tomorrow night, will be one of his last before taking on Jack Washburn, the Bad Man of the rival mat circuit . . . The match is made and the promoters only awaiting the right time to announce it.

Ireland has a worthy Olympic successor to the late Martin Sheridan in the personage of Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, who won the hammer at the last Olympics . . . Besides being the world's hammer-throwing champion, Dr. O'Callaghan is Ireland's amateur heavyweight champion boxer . . . The Irish giant puts the shot better than 57 feet and scales the discus more than 140 . . . Despite his bulk, he clears six feet four inches in the high and has beaten 23 feet in the broad . . . He runs 100 meters in 32 seconds and has done the 110-meter hurdles in 15 2-5 seconds . . . You haven't heard much about O'Callaghan in boxing over here but no opponent in Ireland yet has answered the gong in the second round.



Pen Hallowell and Gene Venske mustn't think they're going to have the 1500-meter Olympic pudding all to themselves . . . In addition to the foreign contestants, watch Henry Brocksmith and Glenn Cunningham . . . The Indiana star has done 4.14 and the Kansan 4.13 for the mile this season . . . Over the boards last winter Brocksmith did 4.12⅘ . . . Venzke's work in the three-quarter-mile race at Yankee Stadium next Thursday closely will be watched by Hallowell and us New Englanders . . . The Eastern Olympic tryouts here at Harvard Stadium are just around the bend, one week from next Friday and Saturday.

Max Schmeling's using of fresh sparring partners daily is a great improvement on the American system of working with the same old punch absorbers throughout the training grind . . . Cuts over Sammy Fuller's eyes have healed and the great little Boston lightweight soon will be ready for action again . . . If Schmeling and Sharkey put up a sensational fight two weeks from tonight they may pull boxing out of the dumps . . . Cauliflower Pfd. is selling at the lowest point it has touched since the Rickard-Dempsey group made the million-dollar gates . . . So far our American competitors this year haven't covered themselves with glory in international competitions . . . Is Uncle Sam slipping?

That new open-air Rickard Stadium, in which Sharkey and Schmeling will battle, officially will be opened on Thursday night when Ed Strangler Lewis and Dick Shikat meet for the Milk Fund before what is expected will be a record wrecking wrestling crowd, despite the depression . . . Here's hoping Pepper Martin, world's series hero, doesn't find his batting eye in the present series between the Braves and the Cardinals . . . The world's champions seem to be striking their gait . . . The series with the Western clubs will give us all a real line on the Braves . . . We're all rooting that Gene Sarazen does a Bobby Jones in the British Open and starts Uncle Sam back on the winning trail.

HULL BOY TO SEEK 6TH WIN TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

Apple-cheeked Bob Brown, most brilliant new mound comet to flash across the baseball firmament this season, is due to be on the firing line for our inspired Braves when they open their first home stand against the dangerous Western entries at the Wigwam tomorrow.

And if Nantasket Bobby, still undefeated, can turn in a victory at the expense of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, first of the hostiles from the wide open spaces to show here, he'll own six straight wins.

The series with the Cards was scheduled to open this afternoon, but clouds and a threat of rain caused the Tribal management to postpone the game, which means the champions will have a double-header to play on their next visit here late next month.

The Cards are one of the teams that Brown has beaten in compiling an early-season record that is one of the main topics of conversation whenever and wherever baseball is discussed these days.

He pitched twice against the champions in St. Louis. The first day he started, and the only reason he didn't walk everybody in the ball park was because he was yanked after passing the first three batters.

His mates, however, kept his victory slate clean by going out and winning the game. So the very next afternoon Bobby, to show his appreciation, rushed to Bruce Cunningham's rescue and pitched five scoreless innings to get credit for a win.

Champs Can't Scare Youthful Hurler

That was typical of this youngster. World's champions should cause a 20-year-old lad serving his first season in the majors no end of worry, but they, or any other rival, mean no more to Bobby than the sand-lot opposition he was facing down in Hull when Jack Slattery, Braves scout, found him a few years back.

A club may make him look bad one day, but that doesn't bother him a bit. On the contrary, he'll beg for a chance to go back the next afternoon and likely as not he'll hurl invincible ball.

This confidence, aided and abetted by a fast ball that blinds most batsmen, and hops away from the few who can see it, was carried Bobby to five victories in a row and it promises to lead him on to one of the best records ever turned in by a rookie hurler.

It is even within the realm of possibility that he, along with his older and more experienced, yet rookie mate, "Huck" Betts, who hoists of six victories and no defeats, will keep the Braves high in the race all season.

It is easy and appears wise and perfectly safe to say that the Warriors are bound, eventually, to slow down and will do extremely well to finish in the first division, but two pitchers who can win three-fourths of their games can make an otherwise second division club a winner.

And just as long as Brown and Betts keep winning regularly in turn with Brandt, Cantwell, Zachary and the other veterans, who turned in over 60 victories last season, the Braves will remain serious contenders with an even chance of winning out.

Cards Confident They Will Win Flag

The Cardinals, opening here in fourth place, have lost one more game than they have won so far, which is far from being a championship pace. Yet, they are only five games from the top and, in keeping with most of the experts, are confident they will win the flag for the third consecutive season.

If they don't come through, the St. Louis management must stand accused of having tossed away the title for a bag of gold.

For since they were last here, the Cards have lost the services of Chick Hafey, the circuit's leading hitter in '31; Burleigh Grimes, pitching hero of the last world's series; Flint Rhem, another good pitcher, and Andy High, pinch-hitter extraordinary, and all they have to show for these players is cash.

The same club that won the National League pennant the past two years could run away with the race this season, but deprived of its strongest offensive and cog and two winning pitchers, the Mound City entry is now having its troubles staying in the first division.

Still, the management can't be blamed for letting these players out even if their loss costs the club the championship.

For baseball is dead in St. Louis. Even with their little of world's champions as an endorsement, the Cards have to play synthetic doubleheaders on Sunday to keep the wolf out of the front office.

Under such conditions the only thing left for an owner to do is to sell his stars for money, and the St. Louis fans have no license to criticize Sam Breadon for having done so.

Don't get the idea, though, that these Cards are helpless. They aren't as strong as last season, but they are still one of the best-balanced entries in the flag hunt and any club that beats them out is likely to find itself in possession of the pennant.

John "Pepper" Martin, brilliant outfielder of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, today makes his first local appearance since turning in the greatest world's series performance ever and defeating the Philadelphia Athletics almost single handed. Pepper's great work in the 1931 classic wasn't entirely unexpected by local fans. They had seen him whip the Braves several times during the regular campaign, sometimes by hitting, sometimes by miracle fielding and still other times by spectacular base-running. Handicapped by an ankle injury which kept him out of the lineup for a long spell, Pepper hasn't burned up the circuit to date this season, but he must be watched carefully by the Braves and all other rivals for he's due to break out into a rash of base hits and stolen bases any day now.

Pepper loves to play ball and his reckless efforts to win games make him one of the most colorful players in the game. He crashed into concrete barriers as though they were made of paper. He speeds around the bases so fast that he often has to throw himself in order to stop. He's always worth the price of admission to any game in which he participates. He'll do his stuff against the Braves at the Wigwam, tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. Don't miss him!

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The Red Sox open their first Western invasion of the season in St. Louis this afternoon, when they begin a four-game series with the sixth-place Browns, who won three out of four tilts on their last visit here.

Paul Andrews and Henry Johnson, the pitchers secured from the Yanks in exchange for Danny MacFayden, will probably be pressed into service in the Mound City by Manager Collins.

The stay of one or the other of these new fingers with the Fenway flock promises to be brief if Bob Quinn is offered a good infielder in exchange for either.

The Sox won but two games during their homa stand against the Western entries. They should do much better out in the wide open spaces. The brand of ball they showed in taking the Senators into camp twice last Saturday will halt most of the clubs in the West.

Lefty Grove

The perky Phillies smothered the Dodgers, 15 to 7, in the only major league game played on Monday. Chuck Klein, the Philly slugger who is leading the National League in home runs, banged out his 14th circuit drive, which leaves him two upon "Rip" Collins of the Cards, and Hack Wilson bat two and O'Doul and Wright one each for the Dodgers.

Connie Mack used both Lefty Grove and George Earnshaw to score a 5 to 1 victory over the Reds in an exhibition game in Cincinnati yesterday. Were any pilot other than the master-mind of the champion Athletics to send his two aces after a meaningless victory, he would probably be fired on the spot and, in all probability, would then be rushed to the nearest psycopathic hospital.

The roster of every big league club must be reduced to 23 players not later than a week from tomorrow. All deals between major league clubs must also be completed by that time. Both the Braves and Red Sox must turn loose three players to get down to the limit.

Hubert Pruett, southpaw, has been purchased by the Braves from the Newark club for use as a relief pitcher, the Wigwam office has announced. Another announcement is that Weston Adams, son of Charles F. Adams of the Braves, has been appointed road secretary of the Tribe.

STORM HALTS CREW DRILLS

The freshman and combination crews were restricted to a two and a half mile spin down stream.

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 7 (AP)—Rain and a strong wind restricted the Yale crews training on the Thames river for the Harvard regatta to hort workouts this morning.

Coach Ed Leader took Brewster, No. 2, and Atwood, No. 3, of the varsity 8, rubbing before the crew was ordered with the junior varsity on a short upstream paddle.

Houghton's Nine Is Beaten By Filenes

Loose fielding by the Houghton infield, coupled with a home run by Hardy of Filene's, was instrumental in the latter team scoring a 5-to-3 victory at the Fens stadium last night.

Phil McGarry hurled good ball for Houghton and deserved to win, but his team-mates failed to cooperate. This is the first defeat for Houghton's, they having scored three previous victories.

ARMSTRONG TO ROW; OUT AS LEADER

At a meeting of the committee on the regulation of Athletic sports at Harvard the following vote was passed:

"Voted: To accept the resignation of Thomas E. Armstrong as captain of the varsity crew. The action is taken on the insistence of Armstrong.

"The committee condemns the gross misrepresentations in certain papers. It is the finding of the committee that there was no fight and no disturbance of the public peace."

William J. Bingham, chairman of the committee, stated that the acceptance of Armstrong's resignation did not make him ineligible for participation in Harvard rowing. Bingham said that Armstrong would go to the Harvard rowing quarters at Red Top, Ct., today.

The Daily Dozen

By Myles T. McSweeney

Picking the winner in the National League pennant race is a cinch. It will be one of the eight teams.

The teams in the National League are bunched like fingers in a mitten.

And that's only because they are not in the National League.

Either all the teams in the National League are very, very good, or they are all very, very rotten, except the Braves.

And there's no way of telling until the National League winner meets the victor in the American League in the world series.

"I am going to stay in Boston," writes Mondt, "until Jack Washburn joins the Boy Scouts."

It is rumored that Bert Potts, Garden mat referee, is going back to Australia soon to see if he can discover a kangaroo capable of defeating Washburn.

Washburn has defeated Turkish Tigers, Bulgarian Bears, Lions of a half dozen nationalities, but Potts thinks Washburn will get a kick out of meeting a kangaroo.

Now, if the Braves will only play their Cards right!

CROWLEY NIEMIEC

THIS FLEET CRUSADER found a safe haven at third base in the eighth inning of the game at the Heights in which Holy Cross edged Boston College, 6 to 5. Niemiec, the Purple flash, couldn't get home and the inning ended without a score. The win was the second over B. C. this year for the Worcester clan, thus giving the Crusaders the series.

IN HIS WORKOUTS with his sparring partners at Kingston MAX SCHMELING exercises just as much care taping his hands as he will before the big bout against Jack Sharkey, two weeks from tonight. Max knows that his hands must be just right to cop.

THE BORE of the training grind hasn't yet affected Max Schmeling's playmate. Here you see JACK SHARKEY strumming on the guitar. Abe Lyman and his orchestra visited the Orangeburg training camp and Jack convulsed the crowd with a "solo." Lyman directing the orchestra. Jack promises to play Die Wacht Am Rhein all over Herr Schmeling's classic features when they meet for the title on June 21.

BEN EASTMAN laughed at the track records again as he flashed through over 800 meters in 1 minute 50 seconds, in an Olympic trial meet at San Francisco. (International News Photos.)

America's 'Big Three' Qualify in British Open

Sandwich, England, June 7 (AP)—America's "big three" in the British open golf championship—Tommy Armour, defending champion, MacDonald Smith and Gene Sarazen—safely qualified among the leaders today for the 72 holes of medal play proper, but home-bred British golfers furnished all the fireworks.

MacSmith and Armour had 36 hole totals of 146, MacSmith with 73-73 and Armour with 75-71 and Sarazen, one of the leaders yesterday with a 73 took 76 for a 36-hole total of 149.

Alfred Robert Bradbeer, young Somerset professional, held the lead with only a few scores yet to be posted with a fine total of 141, adding a 71 today to his 70 of yesterday.

The main interest, however, was furnished by Eric McRuvie, young Scotch amateur and Walker cup player and Ben Curtis, English professional, who scored 69 over Prince's par 71 stretch to break the course record of Jock Hutchison and Arthur Havers by two strokes.

Two American amateurs among the early finishers also apparently had qualified. Robert Sweeny, American student at Oxford scored a 76 today and 75-76—151 and Douglas Grant, American living in London and a member at the Royal St. George's, scored a fine 72 yesterday on the border line with 80-75—155.

Cotton, With 154, in Danger Zone

Gordon Smith, Palm Beach, Fla., professional, who had an 88 yesterday, did not turn in his card.

A brilliant 70 over the rugged Prince's layout brought Walter Pursey, Seattle pro, back into competition with a total of 151 after a discouraging 81 yesterday all but wiped him from the competition.

His round came within a stroke of equalling the new course record of 69 set earlier in the day by Eric McRuvie and Don Curtis.

Pursey Clips Par by Two Strokes

Pursey, with his game under perfect control today stripped a pair of strokes from par on both nines, going out in 34 and coming back in 36.

Ted Ray, British veteran, added a 78 to his 73 of yesterday for a total of 151 and easy qualification, but Ernest Whitcombe was in danger with 84-73 for 157.

Joshua Crane, of Boston, shot himself out of the tournament by adding an 85 to his 80 in the first round for a total of 174.

T. A. Torrance, amateur star, turned in a fine 71 today to keep within range of the leaders with 78-71-149.

British Stars Up With the Leaders

Among the better-known British professionals well up in the field were Arthur Havers, last Briton to win the title, in 1923, with 148; Archie Compston, 149; A. H. Padgham, 148; Tom Green, 148; George Duncan, 147, and R. A. Whitcombe, 146.

The 100 low scores and ties will start all over again tomorrow at Prince's course, with an 18-hole round tomorrow, another 18-hole round Thursday and the final 36 holes for the 60 low scorers, Friday.

Sarazen made some costly excursions into the tall rough and found numerous bunkers to send his score four over par.

His outward nine was without unusual incident, except for a long putt he holed on the first, but he was in the bunkers on the 10th, 16th and 18th holes coming home. He also took three from the edge of the green on the 18th and made a wry face as he turned in his card.

H. C. NINE WINS FROM B. C.

Holy Cross repeated its performance of a week ago by defeating Boston College in the second game of the annual series at University Heights. But whereas the Crusaders romped through the Maroon and Gold defenses at Worcester in the opener, they had a hard time squeezing out a 6-to-5 victory over the revamped B. C. nine at the Heights.

A hit batter, a stolen base, a muffed fly and a sacrifice bunt gave the Purple its slim margin of victory, breaking a 5-to-5 tie which had been established in the seventh inning.

Gallagher lacked control. He struck out eight of the hard-hitting Purple batsmen, and allowed only four scattered hits. But he passed 12 besides hitting a batter, and because of this found himself constantly in the hole.

Earl "Duke" McIntyre, B. C. backstop, lead both teams with a perfect day at bat. He smashed out four singles in four times at bat.

The Boston College nine clashes with the Alumni this afternoon at University Heights in the feature of the Class Day program. Jim Powers, a varsity hurler, and Coach Frank McCrehan should link up in a pitching duel. Coaches Freddie Moncewicz and George Colbert will also take the field against their charges.

The others in the Alumni lineup will be Weston, first base; Hank O'Day, third base; Temple, Reagan and Shea in the outfield. Capt. Andrew Spognardi will direct the B. C. nine.

Melrose Benefit Carnival Tomorrow

At DeMar Field, Melrose, tomorrow evening there will be an athletic carnival to aid the Melrose unemployment fund. A feature of the carnival will be a baseball game between Melrose and Malden high school teams. There will also be track and field events and exhibition matches.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

It is the first time Sharkey has had what the boys call a black eye since he busted out of the preliminary ranks.

Mr. Boston

Following his workout, Sharkey called my attention to his score board which shows he has boxed 106 rounds since he entrenched himself here. That's as many rounds as he boxed getting ready for Carnera, Walker and the last Schmeling match. Looks as if Jack is serious in his determination to win back the heavyweight title for America.

Jack McCarthy of Roxbury is up here with Sharkey. He will box in one of the preliminaries on the Sharkey-Schmeling card. McCarthy weighs 184 pounds and promises to make a fresh start, which will cause the fans to forget all about his defeat at the hands of Charley Retzlaff.

Schaaf to Get $5000 for Poreda Match

Schaaf is getting $5000 for his meeting with Poreda. Which should help pay for the fleet yacht he has bought from Scituate Joe Doherty.

And leave a few iron men for his new Chinese cook. Yeah—Schaaf is getting along in the world.

Sharkey's down to 203 pounds, which proves he was all wet when he thought he would scale around 205 for Schmeling. He'll be at 200 pounds on fight day.

The rush started on the $5 tickets, which will be sold out by the day of the bout. The $2.10 and $3.30 tickets will also sell out. The drag will be in the $10 and $15 tickets.

Broadway now believes the show will draw $500,000 and may go higher. All because the Milk Fund has taken a hand in the promotion.

The Milk Fund was responsible for the cut to $2.10 in thousands of tickets.

Striking Caddies Return to Links

Greenwich, Ct., June 7 (INS)—Only a few of the more than 100 caddies who struck on the Round Hill Club golf course against a slash in pay from $1 to 90 cents a round returned to work today.

Playing members were compelled to carry their own bags as they made their way over the links.

HORSE 'DOPER' GOES TO JAIL

New York, June 7—Jimmy Meehan, gambler and pal of the late Arnold Rothstein, was sentenced to six months in jail after he pleaded guilty to "doping" of a race horse named Mr. Sponge, racing at Aqueduct in September, 1931.

Meehan was implicated by two negroes, who told authorities at the time that he paid them $25 a week and $300 for each horse they "doped." They traveled around the country for him, they said.

Four Bay State Golfers Qualify for U. S. Open

By BILL GRIMES

When Billy Burke starts to defend his United States open title at Fresh Meadows late this month, New England will be represented by four Bay Staters and a like number of Connecticut products, and in this group will be three amateurs.

During the sectional qualifying rounds at the Belmont Spring Country Club, Jack Curley, Stoney Rise and Jack Williams, New Haven C. C., lead the field with 142, which was six strokes below their nearest competitors, Dave Hackney, Vesper, and a couple of amateurs from the Nutmeg state, Charlie Clare, Racebrook C. C., and Bob Grant, Wethersfield.

Three Greater Boston players, John Bernardi, Charles River; Joe Batchelder, Salem C. C., and Eddie Lund, who formerly caddied at Wollaston but is now a pro at the Fairfield, Ct., Country Club composed the remainder of the eight who will represent this district.

Four of the qualifiers turned in the same cards for each round, Jack Curley had a pair of 71's, while Dave Hackney, Bob Grant and Charlie Clare were 74 for each round.

Moreover, with the exception of Jack Williams, who was 79 for the first round and 72 for the p. m., Eddie Lund and Joe Batchelder were 76—75—149, and Jack Bernardi knocked one stroff his morning round of 75 in the afternoon.

Hancock Shimkonis Fail to Qualify

For the first time in years there were no sensational comebacks after a poor round, and Roland Hancock, John Shimkonis and Paul Bentley were the only players 76 or better in the morning who failed. Hancock blew in the p. m. requiring 79 strokes. Bentley's 77 let him out by two strokes.

Although there were the usual number of tough breaks, the worst fell to the lot of John Shimkonis, the Andover C. C. professional, who missed out by a stroke after taking an eight on the 28th hole. Shimkonis did not qualify, but he did establish himself as one of the gamest players in the field.

After taking an eight on the 10th hole in the afternoon, Shimkonis buckled down to work and came through with a sub-par finish and, in all probability, derived more personal benefit from his last eight holes than he would have received had he qualified along orthodox lines.

The failure of Jesse Guilford and Fred Wright to qualify was an upset. Guilford was hitting the ball beautifully all day, but in the morning round he was unable to get a putt to drop. In the p. m. a ball out of bounds at the 11th caused a 20 minute discussion as to whether it was or was not playable and started The Gun on his way to a seven and he finally picked up at the 17th.

Not since the qualifying round of the United States open was held at Lido in 1925 has Jack Curley played as well as he did yesterday. He was hitting the ball well from start to finish and seldom was in any trouble.

During the 36 holes Curley did not take worse than a five and his two rounds were almost duplicates, for he did not vary more than a stroke on any hole and played ten of them in the same figures on both rounds.

KNIGHT SLAMS OSTER IN ARENA GO

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Joe Knight of Cairo, Ga., who makes his home at present in Boston, had a great night at the Arena when he battered Willie Oster of Chicago for 10 rounds to win the feature bout of the Argonne A. A. show.

Knight gathered the honors in nine of the rounds. The only round in which Oster showed well was the fouth when he threw a right-hand punch to the chin which sent Knight to his knees.

Starting off with the first round Knight started a bombardment which lasted until the final gong. Oster might have fared better if he had attacked Knight in the [illegible] which seemed to be the only weak sector that Knight might have.

Henry Fapo of Louisville, Ky., won the 10-round verdict from Rudy Mar[illegible] of [illegible] City. It was a fairly even contest with Fapo [illegible] his [illegible] steady [illegible].

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Although Jesse Guilford and Fred Wright, who are second only to Francis Ouimet in this state, failed to qualify for the U. S. open at Belmont Spring, the amateurs took three of the eight places allotted to this section. Joe Batchelder, Salem, Bob Grant, a 22-year-old youngster, and Charlie Clare, a couple of Nutmeg Staters, came through with flying colors.

John Shimkonis, Andover, is the boy who had the tough break at Belmont. After hitting a tee shot out of bounds, his caddy lost the second drive and John took a disastrous eight, losing out by one stroke. Shimkonis' finish, 2—3—4, was one of the greatest exhibitions of courage ever seen in any championship event.

If John Curley, the peppery pro from Stoney Brae, is grooving his swings at Fresh Meadows as he was at Belmont Spring, watch him. Curley was machinelike yesterday and could have been strokes lower, but played heady golf to get a first place tie with Jack Williams, New Haven C. C., with a pair of 71's.

With class A and B of the W. G. A. in a medal tournament in the morning and 150 men in action in the afternoon, Pine Brook Valley will be a busy spot tomorrow.

After the tournament at Pine [illegible] Miss Rosamond [illegible] the Inter-City [illegible] which will represent the W. G. A. at the Merion Cricket [illegible] next week.

Miss Elizabeth Skinner, Mt. Tom, who is rated as a two handicap player, will be a member of the Boston Inter-City team. Miss Skinner has never participated in any W. G. A. events, but she is the lowest handicapped woman player in the state, one stroke lower than Mrs. F. H. Fraser, of Oakley, the state champion.

Eddie Lund, who qualified for the United States Open at Belmont Spring, started golf while a caddy at Wollaston. He is a Quincy boy and judging from the article of golf he shot yesterday may be recalled to this section of the country and established in a good berth.

TRAILERS IN MOVIES TOO EXCITING FOR WORDS

By GILBERT SELDES

MR. RUBE GOLDBERG drew a comic strip a few days ago under the title of "That's Life" which I recommend to exhibitors of movies all over the world. There comes a moment in all programs when the feature picture has been shown and the Silly Symphony tantalizingly hold off, and this interval is filled with snips and cuttings from future pictures, with the most elaborate mechanics for making the titles glow and spin and grow large before your eyes, with descriptions of unbelievable splendor in words, with a few hoarse words spoken at a crucial moment, cut off just before you find out what is going to happen. And then comes the date of showing "at this theater." As the exhibitors are unwilling to concentrate on one following program, they usually show two or three features which are to come, so that at the end you are completely confused and do not know whether "Shark's Blood," is a week from next Tuesday or "Passion's Folly" three days ago for matinees only.

GILBERT SELDES

Nothing Doing

Goldberg's cartoon shows two people—man and wife, I suppose, because they have the look which Goldberg always manages to give devoted couples—sitting before a screen. In successive pictures they read:

Tues. & Wed.—Powerful Emotional Thundering Drama of Passion.

Thurs. & Fri.—A Woman Bares Her Soul—Life in the Raw—a Thrill a Second.

Sat. & Sun.—The Climax of All Creation! A Startling Sight Never Before Beheld by Human Eyes.

Then they go out and the man says, "There doesn't seem to be anything very exciting for next week." And his wife answers, "We can stay at home for a change."

On the strip itself, comment is superflous. I can only add my experience, which is that I have never, in 15 years, been attracted to a picture by the trailers shown for the specific purpose of exciting interest. All descriptions are, naturally, bunk. The movies advertise themselves in circus terms, which are peculiarly inappropriate except when they are doing circus stunts.

Incidentally, they do not do circus stunts often enough. One of the current successes is "Tarzan," which is such a stunt and is extremely good entertainment. From the moment Johnnie Weismuller begins to yodel as he swings from amazingly convenient branches in the jungle the picture is conceived as sheer fun. No one is asked to believe that it was taken in Africa or anywhere but Hollywood.

Grunts Are Enough

One great advantage of "Tarzan" is that for the most part it cannot use a high-flown language. Tarzan's communications with the heroine[s] is a [illegible] tongue (the talkies like to throw in a bit of unimportant dialogue in French or Spanish, so why not a little pure chimpanzee?) and the love making is almost all in action. There is even comedy in making love, as when Tarzan gets the idea that the girl is giving her own name and wants to know his. She touches her breast and says, "Jane," or whatever her name is. Presently he smites his chest and says, "Tarzan." Then he begins punching her and himself alternately, and more and more rapidly, as he shouts, "Jane, Tarzan, Jane, Tarzan," and the effect is quite as good as the elaborate love-makings of a Lonsdale, a Coward or a Barry. That is, for the screen.

* * *

A man engaged in the business of selling plays to the movies betrayed himself the other day to me by a protest against the dialogue of the talkers. He said that even if the speeches were good he wouldn't like them, because they spoiled his own share in the pictures. In the old days, he says, when a lover whispered to his beloved, and you could not hear the words, one might think he said, "Baby, I'm for you" and another might suspect that the words were, "Yours is the face that launched a thousand ships." But now when you hear the young man say, "How about it?" you have no choice.

Psychologically, this critic is right. The silent picture allowed each spectator to frame its sentiments in his own words and, thereby, made every one of us in a small way a creative dramatist, writing our own speeches for situations in which we identified ourselves. In those days we knew that we did not look like Valentino, but we imagined that we could talk like him. Now we know that we neither look nor talk like Clark Gable. Do you call that progress?

WHAT'S AHEAD FOR POPEYE

BOSTON GANGDOM ORGANIZED WITH CZAR AT HEAD

guaranteed not only maximum protection and valuable contacts but the aid of able attorneys in case any "pinches" or "falls" become the lot of his new allies.

Former U. S. Attorneys on Gang's Legal Staff

Three former assistant United States attorneys, who know the inside of prosecution in the federal courts, have been retained at flat rates—so much a year to keep him and his associates out of trouble.

This is tantamount to conspiracy on the part of the lawyers as well as the Racket King, in the view of federal investigators, and it was learned that certain other lawyers, on that ground, refused to undertake the task.

This plan may prove a mistake on the part of the Racket King. For 12 years, a dozen lawyers have been at times the recipients of his fees and the fees of the other "mobs" which he has now combined. They may show him that they have influence, too, and may find a way to use against him the ability and inside knowledge which he has scorned.

His control was built up on bootleg liquor and the immense profits therein. I related yesterday how prohibition profits made highly organized crime possible. Endowed with brains, this man used his money shrewdly.

The federal report on his career deals with numerous activities under his control, both legitimate and illicit.

Director of Several Legitimate Enterprises

Aside from liquor, he has simultaneously operated or directed at least nine semi-legitimate enterprises. To the exterior view, they were all within the law. But some of them, while probably returning a profit as legal businesses, were producing bigger gains in other ways.

Some of his liquor profits went into loans to retail bootleggers. Some into buying stolen jewelry and other loot from burglars and prowlers. Some into advances to various kinds of "crooks." Some into buying stolen bonds. It is thus that his influence, founded originally on his creation of a rum syndicate, extended far and wide.

That is the story of organized crime in all the large cities today, in greater or lesser degree.

Outside of Boston, wherever "mob methods" or syndicate crime holds forth, he is recognized as the biggest power in this section. He is the best man to make contact with and the mobs in the other cities know it.

Samuel Reinstein, a New York white slaver, who met his death here, being put on the spot and slain in a Huntington ave. hotel, was going through the process of making contact with him to open a gambling joint in the South End. Reinstein had hired a place and was arranging for "protection" when a bullet put an end to his dreams.

Reinstein did not come here with his contact arranged for him in advance, but in short order learned in what way he could best get established.

Gets 10 P. C. Cut From Visiting Criminals

A mythical case might indicate how these contacts generally work.

Suppose a salesman from Springfield is chatting with a stranger in a hotel in Duluth, Minn. He is disgruntled at his employers and is therefore talking all the more freely. He remarks it is "too bad" they have to be economical when they have $150,000 in Liberty bonds in the safe.

The stranger finds out who the salesman is, what concern he works for. If the stranger is an "independent," he steps into Springfield and tries to "pull the job" himself. But if he is a "mob" man, he goes to the "mob" leader.

He asks for the loan of a "grand" to finance the "job." The leader wants to know what's up. He learns about the bonds. He cautions his man to be careful in Massachusetts and if anything goes wrong to get in touch with the influential Boston individual.

"If you get a 'fall,'" says the "mob" leader, meaning if his man is arrested, "get in touch with the Boston man and he'll send help. Or get in touch with me and I'll get in touch with him."

If the robbery is successful, the Boston contact gets 10 per cent. If it fails, and arrest follows, a lawyer is provided and the Boston man gets a cut on the fee.

In this manner crime interlocks from city to city—crime based on "mob" methods. And each section has its czar or biggest influence.

Czar Has Complete Control of Bootlegging

The Boston Racket King has virtual control of organized bootlegging. There are independent gangs, some of which I am going to describe in later articles. But his power is great and profitable.

A small-time bootlegger may launch a business without getting his permission. He won't be bothered until his profits reach a certain amount. Then he will receive a visit.

"Where do you get your liquor?" he will be asked.

"From So-and-So."

"Well, that's O. K., but you know we're paying for the protection you're getting. Give us a chance to cut in."

The bootlegger switches his orders to the syndicate operated by the Racket King. Naturally, complications result, which sometimes end in gunplay and the killing of some obnoxious lesser member of one combine or the other.

But the Racket King does not go in for murder. He never orders it. It is not his way of doing business.

Gains His Ends by Strong Influence

His strong point is influence, not only locally but nationally. More than once he has exerted his national influence for his friends.

He may be seen in the blackest of spots and the whitest of spots, consorting with figures in the underworld and figures of high reputation.

His universal friendships are his pride and his strength. Occasionally, when he is with his spotless friends, a "heel" or runner or satellite may be seen to slip up to him to deliver some message, but it is only for a moment. He never mixes his company.

In the past recruit policemen have felt his power in their ignorance of the influence he wields in behalf of himself and his associates. Transfers of patrolmen "to the sticks" can in some cases be traced to this very reason.

At least one police captain has been placed in a choice "spot" because of his power. Once he favors a man, the Racket King will go the limit to help him.

(Read in tomorrow's Boston Evening American the inside story of the formation and activities of one of Boston's most colorful gangs.)

INCOME TAX ACT PASSED FIRST TO AID POOR

This is the fourth in a series of articles discussing the state and federal tax systems and showing their unpopularity.

The legislative committee on taxation in the report to the House on April 2, 1926, prior to passage of the State income tax law, said in part:

"The taxation of intangible property at present varying rates of local taxation has raised the chief evils of the existing system of taxation in this Commonwealth.

"These are, in brief, the great injustice done to the few, widows and others, who pay taxes upon such property, as compared with the many owners who do not pay the concentration of wealth in towns with low tax rates, leaving the poor people to bear the burden in the cities and towns with high tax rates, and the loss of taxes by removal of taxable property to other states which have more equitable systems of taxation.

UNIFORM RATE

"The 6 per cent tax upon the income of intangible property which House Bill 2071 provides for is uniform and state-wide and is to be administered by the tax commissioner and enforced by compulsory returns.

"The danger of a higher rate in the beginning is that it will drive taxable intangibles out of the Commonwealth, either by change of residence of the owner or by a change of investment to non-taxables.

"If this is avoided by fixing a low rate and then sufficient revenue is not produced, it is a simple matter to raise the rate and get an increased revenue from the property already disclosed within the Commonwealth, but if property is driven out of the State by too high a rate, a change to a lower rate will not bring it back at once.

"Under the present system it is impossible for trustees, executors, administrators and others required by law to make returns, to own taxable securities, because the tax at local rates of taxation would take up too much of the income of the securities. The same reason has discouraged many individuals, who for one reason or another fear that the local assessors may learn of their holdings, from investing in taxables.

REVENUE LOST

"The result has been a loss of revenue and an artificial and unhealthy demand for non-taxables which has not benefited Massachusetts industries; but has in numerous instances caused industries located in other states to obtain Massachusetts charters in such form that only a nominal franchise tax was paid, but an opportunity was offered to investors to avoid taxation on the company's stock.

"Also this demand for non-taxables has operated to the positive detriment of Massachusetts industries in many cases.

"Thus cities and towns have lost revenue and nobody has been benefited."

In recommending a tax of 3 per cent on profits from buying and selling securities the committee reported that this provision went far "toward solving the problem of taxing persons who derive no income

Another instalment on the State and Federal tax systems will be published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow

BREAK LAID TO COUNTERFEITER

Persons whom the police believe were counterfeiters, stole engraving pans and plates worth $500 from the M. T. Reid & Co. engraving establishment at 5 West st early today.

Expert taste was shown in the selection of the loot, as it contained no material worth of benefit money to have at hand.

The proprietors and the police are still uncertain how the thieves got in, as there were more than one. The loss was discovered late last night. The theft was discovered at 6 a. m. today.

Another downtown store was broken into between 12 and 1 this morning and looted of a few dollars.

The methods were crude. The thief battered a brick through the plate glass window of a Washington st. department store and made off with several gold watches and diamond rings.

Rich Chicago Youth to Wed Polynesian Princess

The Princess is Beatrice Campbell Beckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Charles Beckley, of Lahaina, Woods. The young man is George Dallas McCauley, 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McCauley, Chicago.

The bride is a niece of Princess Kawananakoa of Hawaii. On her father's side she is a descendant of Kamehamea. And one of the prized mementoes of the family is a handsome jeweled and created cigarette case given to the family by the son of the late King Kalakaua.

The [illegible] princess and her fiance met last October in the home of Sen. Hubert M. Shaylor in Honolulu, where Mr. [illegible] Beckley's aunt was giving a party. Two months later the couple were engaged.

Miss Beckley is an art student. Her father, a big game hunter, has given the Natural Museum in San Francisco more than $40,000 worth of trophies bagged by himself in the jungles.

Maj. Gibbs to Be at Jordan's Tomorrow

Maj. A. Hamilton Gibbs, author, will be in Jordan Marsh Co. book department tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 4 to autograph copies of his latest book, "Undertow."

Stork Due to Bring World's Richest Baby About July 4

Newport, R. I., June 7 (INS)—The world's richest baby, heir to the vast John Nicholas Brown fortune is expected to be born on or about July 4, it was revealed today.

The expectant parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, are at their large estate, Harbor Court overlooking Narragansett Bay, and Mr. Brown is expected to leave shortly for a maternity hospital in Providence.

The father-to-be came into the title of the world's richest boy more than 15 years ago when he inherited the fortunes of his father, John and his uncle, Harold with a week of each other. His fortune was estimated at between $[illegible],000,000 and $100,000,000.

If the successor to his title is born on Independence Day, it will mark the continuity of patriotic birthdays in the family. Brown was born on February 22, 1900 as the 132nd day of Washington's birthday.

The mother-to-be is the former Miss Anne Seddon Kingsbury, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Arthur B. Kinsolving of Baltimore, Md. She is a former newspaper woman.

The couple were married in Baltimore, in October, 1930. Their honeymoon was the longest in the history of American society, lasting more than a year and taking them all over Europe. On their return to the United States they took up their residence in Newport.

Mrs. Nicholas Brown, mother of the expectant father, is in the home of her son here. It has not been decided yet, it was reported, which of the older Mrs. Brown or her sister, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, will be godmother.

THIS IS LIFE

WHEN J.O.B. WON HONOR FROM PH. D. AND WHAT CAME OF THE VICTORY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

WHAT WE CALL in our family the J.O.B. joke has popped up again, as it always does at this time of year, and my father, if he could have seen it, would have been tickled as usual.

Nearly 25 years ago I was finishing my college course. I suppose that I was the sort of a boy who was locally considered useless for anything but academic pursuits. Anyway, a neighbor, meeting father one morning, suggested in passing, "I suppose that Robert will be getting a Ph.D. now." And father came back quickly, "No, he will be getting a J.O.B." The memory of certain not inconsiderable sacrifices that father had made, with two more boys still to be educated, doubtless made him feel that an A.B. and an A.M. were enough. So I got a job teaching English up at Williams College.

PROF. ROGERS

Father had a humorous turn of mind, but it did not often take the form of wisecracking, so this little passage of arms rather tickled him. The more he thought about it, the more it tickled him, and so in the innocence of his heart he sent it off to "Life," which in those days was in its prime. And "Life," mind you, paid him $5 for it and printed it.

• • •

Peril to Higher Learning

After that there was no living in the same house with father. He had long suffered under the burden of having two sons with literary aspirations and this was his chance to get back at us. He lost few opportunities to remind us that he not only wrote stuff, but was able to sell it. He got money for what he wrote! For a time he made that mystic combination of letters, J.O.B. unbearable to us. To this day I prefer almost any other word in the language.

But that was not all. Presently the joke began to appear in the exchanges. It was the sort of thing the "Literary Digest" likes, and once in the "Literary Digest" it was well started on its course of devastation. Sometimes I wonder how many deserving and promising and ambitious young scholars have had their lives blighted at the crucial moment by having callous parents quote that joke at them. The damage it must have done to the higher scholarship of the United States must be incalculable.

Springtime by springtime, as June and graduation drew near, that joke would reappear, in newspapers and weeklies and monthlies, credited to the most fantastic sources, mostly not credited to any sources in particular. And Father would collect the evidence and gloat over it and tell us once again how he happened to make the joke in the first place. I have often had a sneaking suspicion that possibly father was not the sole source of that joke. It is not impossible that somebody may have made it before him. It may even have found its way into print before, since it is a reasonably obvious one if your mind gets to playing on the letters.

But It Did Good, Too

Not that father had ever seen it. There is no doubt that with him it was a genuine, 18 carat inspiration of the first water. Anyway, as the joke continued to circle the globe, he became prouder and prouder of it. And he had good right to be. It was—and is—a hardy perennial, of an ever-blooming variety, which will never die so long as there exists wise and hard-working fathers and dreamy and bookish sons with a marked dislike for what baccalaureate addresses call "the marts of trade."

Well, what I was going to say when I started out was that I found the J. O. B. joke in the current "Judge" and, ten minutes later, another version in the current "New Yorker." One of them, I forget which, had ruined it by substituting A.M. for Ph.D., thus spoiling the beautiful and euphonious rhyme of the original. But there was no doubt as to the identity of the joke nor its heredity. It had the strawberry mark on the left shoulder. It had father's eyes, so to speak, and his smile. He will be chuckling at it in Heaven.

I suspect that I am, at bottom, grateful to the joke. If father had never made it, he might have let me go ahead and become a Ph.D. But that would have spoiled the joke and I think father prized that far beyond the degree. Probably he knew, even then, what I did not know then but have since learned, that to become a Ph.D. is a fearful thing. In the past quarter of a century our American colleges have suffered from an epidemic of Ph.D.-itis. It threatens to become endemic. It is virtually impossible to get a college job without one.

A Ph.D. is a person who spends three years doing the most difficult and delicate and detailed original research upon unimportant matters, who then writes an unreadable thesis, which no human eye will ever see, and then goes out to a fresh-water college to teach boys who will be farmers and automobile salesmen, the elements of simple subjects like English composition.

• • •

It's an Educational Racket

He has never been taught how to teach and, often, his preoccupation with the frequency of occurrence of the final unaccented e in Chaucer's earlier poems has left him somewhat out of touch with life.

He has studied—I am speaking now of my own subject—Anglo-Saxon and early English and middle English and Gothic and Celtic and primitive Scandinavian, low German, middle high German, and a large number of other forgotten and prehistoric dialects which may possibly have had some connection with English. With this mastodonic equipment he will spend ten years teaching farm boys to avoid the "comma sentence," keep "shall" and "will" straight, and avoid dangling modifiers. Then he will receive his assistant professorship and will be allowed to give a course on the Romantic Poets.

The Ph. D. requirement, as it exists in America, is one of our greatest educational rackets. Mostly it is a waste of time, mostly it has no bearing on what an instructor is actually going to teach, mostly it spoils him for undergraduate teaching. It makes our graduate schools hell-holes of useless and trivial minutiae. The Ph.D. is, par excellence, the person who knows more and more about less and less.

My memory goes back to the veterans who had no truck with the Ph.D., men like Barrett Wendell and Charles Townsend Copeland, excellent teachers, broad and humane scholars, salty wits, men of the world, friends of youth. Either one of them was worth a hundred common or garden Ph.D.'s rolled into one. Their passing left American education a poorer and thinner and more finicking thing.

If the J.O.B. joke kept me from the sterility of the average doctor of philosophy in my subject, I cannot be other than grateful to my father and that sensible wisecrack of his.

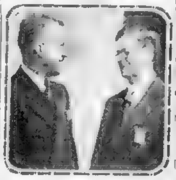
Visiting the Lions

With the Candid Camera

By CANDID CAMERA

I was tossed among the Lions yesterday at the annual convention of the 33d District of the International Association of Lions Clubs at the Hotel Kenmore. There were about 400 delegates on hand from Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont.



The affair was under the leadership of District Governor Henry G. Youngberg, of Taunton, left, chatting with L. T. Wood, district secretary.

Making his annual report. It is full of good things I guess, for the delegates cheered his reading. He is George H. Waterman, deputy district governor.

K. H. Damren, general chairman of the Lions Club, was jotting down notes of the convention when I swung into action.

Here a punning subject—Talk about Lions and Lyons. Talk about man and beast with the same names. The gentleman is John A. Lyons, a leading member of the Lions.

WEEKS LOOMS AS LEADER IN STATE FIGHT

Chiefs Open Fight to Halt Election of Richardson as Committeeman

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

A determined struggle to prevent the election of President Hoover's friend, John Richardson, as the Republican national committeeman from Massachusetts was being organized today among the old-line party chiefs as they completed plans for attending the national convention next week at Chicago.

Richardson wants the job. He has a number of votes pledged to him among the delegates. The assumption has been spread that Mr Hoover, with whom he has been intimate several years, would like to see him chosen for it.

But the old-timers who have waged the party battles in good days and bad have sprung up against Richardson almost to a man the past few days, and they have been joined by a younger element within the party who have spread the word that "John Richardson will not do for us."

Officially, the word is being spread that Richardson lacks the experience fact that comes from long political service.

LIGGETT'S BLUNTNESS HURTS

Under cover the word is being spread that he has not been active long enough in the party to take over the job of handing out part patronage for the State. Further, the claim is made that he is a Hooverite rather than a seasoned Republican and that he has sought to dominate Bay State appointments over National Committeeman Louis K. Liggett, who has not been so hot in the favor of the White House since he told [illegible] Hoover that a dry could not [illegible] to win this Commonwealth.

Hoover is said to be partial to Richardson, although the reply is made that the President has persistently declined to [illegible] himself in internecine State battles. As justification for that statement, it is now said that among Richardson's strongest opponents is Representative Christian Herter who was initiated into service in the G. O. P. largely because of his personal association with Mr. Hoover in the past.

WEEKS RELENTS

The party Big Wigs have concentrated their strength upon Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton. They were rebuffed by his recent statement that he would not accept the national committeeship, but under their pressure they say he has somewhat relented. Weeks is young they admit, but they claim he was an enthusiastic party worker before Richardson ever identified himself with the machine. They say, further, that it would be logical for Weeks to occupy the post once filled by his father, the late John W. Weeks who was United States senator also and Secretary of War in the Harding regime.

Unless Weeks consents the old liners will search out some other reliable to defeat Richardson [illegible] they can. There is some [illegible] of asking ex-Governor Frank G. Allen to accept.

Ex-Senator William M. Butler has been offered the place, but after 40 years of party work he decided not to take up the arduous burdens of a state campaign at this time. Nor would it add to his prestige a great deal since he was chairman of the Republican national committee and managed the overwhelmingly successful national campaign of Calvin Coolidge for President.

SHATTUCK MENTIONED

Butler will go to the convention and will serve as the Bay State member of the resolutions committee but there his service will stop.

He has several times been informally invited to serve as campaign manager for Mr. Hoover this year but that invitation he has repeatedly declined and will continue to decline.

In the event that both Weeks and Allen refuse the state committeeship, the old-timers will go as far as to choose Henry L. Shattuck even though he [illegible] independent [illegible] them. [illegible] Guard [illegible]

The national committeeman [illegible] succeed Liggett will be [illegible] the delegates after the [illegible] Chicago [illegible] next week.

Theatrical Team Is Wrecked as Trio Appear in Court; Man Denies "Cheating"

Another one of those friendly bridge games ended in a free-for-all, wrecked a theatrical team and resulted in the three members appearing in Municipal court today.

The principals were the [illegible] Twins, Mickey and Marney [illegible] and personable and their [illegible] while comedian, Robert Ott [illegible] off stage name is Davis.

Both Marney Jeanette and Davis were found guilty of assault and battery on each other, but their complaints were filed after an exchange of charges and [illegible] charges.

HOW IT STARTED

They have been appearing in local theaters, but from now on the girls will have to go without the comedian. He admitted to Judge Zottoli he would be afraid to return to theatrical work with them, claiming Marney had attacked him with a bottle and a knife.

It all happened according to Marney, when she saw Davis cheating in the bridge game. He was the partner of Chick Setcone, another actor, whose wife was playing with Mickey. Marney, who was the dummy, said she saw Davis signalling to Setcone.

"I told him he was cheating and ordered him out of the game," she said.

"He denied he was cheating but left the game. We had an argument. Then I started to play in his place. He sat on the couch and made wisecracks. I asked him to leave the room. When he refused I went to get the landlord.

ON WITH THE FIGHT

"Then he pushed me to the floor and gave me a black eye. I picked up a tonic bottle. I guess I hit him but not a real blow.

"He ran downstairs when my sister Mickey picked up a flatiron. We chased him three blocks but he got away."

Davis denied he was cheating. He charged that Marney [illegible] a knife as well as a bottle and [illegible] tempted to wield both.

"We had a little Marathon race," he said, "and she was outdistanced."

Quincy Man Kills 46 1-2-Inch Rattler in Blue Hills

A rattlesnake 46½ inches long, probably the largest caught in New England for more than 50 years, was exhibited today at the Boston Society of Natural History, 234 Berkeley st., Back Bay.

The reptile was captured Sunday in the Blue Hills by Stanley C. Trask of 11 Carruth st., Wollaston, a Quincy business man, whose hobby for 25 years has been the capture of snakes.

Trask stunned the snake with a blow on the head and then looped a rope around it in the hopes of bringing it alive. It died, however, on [illegible] to his home.

697 GIVEN DEGREES AT TECHNOLOGY COMMENCEMENT

7 GIRLS AMONG BIG CLASS OF GRADUATES

Sir Henry Thornton, Canadian Railways Chief, Is Orator of Day in Symphony Hall

Seven girl graduates were included in the 461 seniors who received degrees at the 65th graduation exercises of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Symphony Hall today. The total exceeded last year's by 52.

The Commencement address was delivered by Sir Henry W. Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, and the presentation of degrees was by President Karl T. Compton.

[illegible] lege graduate into the field of active politics was given as the only permanent salvation of this or any country by Sir Henry.

"Every country," he said, "gets exactly the sort of government it deserves, and it is only when the mentally trained are willing to take part in administration that a nation may hope to be well run."

A total of 697 degrees were awarded, seven of them going to the young women and [illegible] men were given commissions in the Officers' Reserve Corps [illegible] cates went to graduates below the military age [illegible].

The young women [illegible] ners are Miss Lois [illegible] of Brookline, A. B.; Miss [illegible] Frances Don[illegible] Worcester, B. S.; Miss Anita Katherine Sarah [illegible] mont, B. S.; Miss [illegible] Cambridge, B. S.; Miss Helen [illegible] light Moody [illegible], B. S.; Miss Ann Victoria [illegible] B. S. and Miss Isabel [illegible] Ebel, Brooklyn, N. Y., B. S., who specialized in [illegible].

What to Wear and What Not to Wear—to Keep Clear of Beach Police This Summer

MISS LILLIAN ARDEN, DORCHESTER
This bathing suit comes under the heading of—decorous. That means—proper and correct—and lots of things that are right. So we announce that Metropolitan police officials are going to put their O. K. on this new low-cut suntan back bathing suit. The police will act—so watch out.

MISS "BOBBIE" DEUGEL, REVERE
Thumbs down, say the Metropolitan police and officials at beach resorts on this manner of wearing bathing suits. The bathing suit must be properly adjusted. Sun-bathing is not allowed if you insist on dropping your bathing straps. Straps must not slip from the shoulder. "Suggestive" effects will not be tolerated.

MISS LISA LINDQUIST, DORCHESTER
We say no—but only because Sergt. Joseph Rooney, of the Metropolitan police, thinks no. He has not seen this bathing suit—named, if you please—"The Juan-les-Pins." However, he declares, after hearing a description, that there is little doubt that it will be tabooed. The Russo Salon model looks charming in the brassiere suit, a French creation.

MISS DOROTHEA GREENE, CAMBRIDGE
Decorous and decorative is the class that this cross-strapped bathing suit must be placed in. But again the straps must be in their proper place. There is no objection, say police, to the backless bathing suits. The health practice of partly nude sun baths on sands must stop. Do your sun work in your backyard. Not on the beaches.

DUNHAM'S WIFE IS WORKING IN CANDY PLANT

The girl who rose from secretary to wife of Otis Emerson Dunham, former millionaire, president of Page & Shaw, Inc., is working as a clerk in a Cambridge chocolate factory.

Dunham revealed it today in Salem court when he faced contempt proceedings brought by his divorced wife who charged he had failed to support Shirley, a daughter by the first union.

MET BY HIS WIFE.

She met him on the steps of the courthouse and walked in, while he faced the charges.

Dunham, who has completed 18 months of a two-year sentence for conspiracy in the $2,000,000 stock flotation of Page & Shaw, said his clerking wife is living on the extensive Dunham estate, "Lodgepole," in Beverly, but that the estate had been transferred to a bonding company.

A 1928 income of $50,000 dwindled to $4000 in 1929 and the following year he sold half his interest in the candy company to write off $500,000 in unpaid bills, Dunham testified.

He reiterated a statement of yesterday that his present assets are exactly $6.23.

FIRST WIFE ABSENT

Wife No. 2, who was Alice Crehan before her marriage to Dunham, listened intently as her husband was cross-examined.

Mrs. Mina Dunham, divorced in 1927, was not in court.

BEATEN VICTIM OF MURDER MYSTERY TOSSED OUT HERE
Artist's photo-diagram tells the story of a girl's murder early today on the Cambridge road in a lonely section of Woburn. A woman's scream was heard, an automobile crash, the fleeing car—then she was found. Two hours later, she died. Two hours earlier, she had been ruthlessly beaten, the medical examiner declared. (Staff photo.)

LITTLE LINKS IN THE CHAIN THE LAW IS FORGING TOGETHER
Mute bits of evidence that may form a chain of sufficient strength to drag a slayer to the death chair. The glasses, cigarettes, shoe, earring, motormeter, bolt and other articles were found near where the dying girl lay. They are among the strongest clues the State's detectives on the case have discovered.

"How did you happen to be at the lodging house?" the [illegible] asked.

"I was taking her lodging house license to her," the officer replied. "The dog ran upstairs after me and seized me by the leg. The plants let go before the dog did."

THORNTON SEES 3 U. S. ASSETS

Americans don't sufficiently appreciate the three great assets which ultimately will bring them back to prosperity, in the opinion of Sir Henry W. Thornton, head of the Canadian National Railways.

Sir Henry was in Boston to speak at Technology's commencement exercises.

"You people here has a tradition of sound government," he pointed out. "You have unlimited natural resources and the tremendous purchasing power of 120,000,000 people."

The Canadian reported that there was [illegible] of [illegible] the dominion and [illegible] banking [illegible] abroad.

"We have not had a single bank failure in Canada. Of course, our problem is somewhat simpler than yours, but our method is worth study.

"There are relatively few banks in Canada. More concentration of banking resources. More agreement as between bankers."

North and south of the Canadian border [illegible] there [illegible] too much pessimism, some of [illegible] being dreader than downright alarmism.

'Beating' of Waltham Pupil Probed; May Ban School Rod

Charges that a boy pupil was "severely beaten" last week in the Nahum Hardy grammar school were made by Miss Jeanette Chisholm of the Waltham school committee today.

She demanded that the committee abolish corporal punishment in the schools.

The beating was administered by Miss Emily Sweet, principal of the school, Miss Chisholm reported to the committee.

She said the boy refused to extend his hand for punishment because it was sore and was struck on the arm with a ruler by Miss Sweet.

The committee discovered that no [illegible] rule exists at present that [illegible] allows or prohibits corporal punishment.

After a stormy session behind [illegible] doors Miss Chisholm and Miss Florence A. Summers, another member, were appointed to draw up a rule for consideration.

Miss Chisholm reported that the mother of the boy visited her with the complaint but asked the pupil's name be withheld.

Miss Sweet, reached at the school, [illegible] she knew anything of the [illegible] and referred all questioners to William H. Clayton, superintendent of schools.

[illegible] of the charges, he exclaimed:

"Oh that? I don't know anything about it so can't defend myself."

Supt. Clayton expressed opposition to the drawing of a rule to cover the subject, but would not detail the affair.

Mayor Patrick J. Duane, however, said he was heartily in favor of corporal punishment in the schools.

"It is so much more effective," the mayor said.

MANSUR IS SUED FOR $50,000

The Jack and J[illegible] case in which the Ku Klux Klan did a detective act went a step further today when Alfred L. Harvey of Lynn formally filed a $50,000 alienation suit against Clarence W. Mansur of Malden in Salem Probate Court.

Harvey filed an attachment for the sum on mattress goods and credit entrusted to the Security Trust Co. of Lynn.

Harvey's wife and Mansur were allegedly spotted by a flashlight leaving Mrs. Harvey's farm home in East Campton, N. H., swinging a bucket between them.

SAFE ROBBERS GET $550 LOOT

Safecrackers pried open a heavy safe in the office of the Harvard Automobile Co., 1230 Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, during the night and escaped with $550, officials reported to Cambridge police today.

The thieves gained entrance over a fire escape to the second floor office, broke open a window and worked without detection.

Two other safes, left unlocked, were opened but the thieves found only books and records that are kept there for protection against fire.

RECENT MEMORIES WE LIKE TO REFLECT UPON . . .

Lunching with Mrs. Curtis Guild . . . the queen of Boston and a perfect dear . . . at her sunny, airy villa overlooking the broad, blue ocean at Nahant

MRS. CURTIS GUILD

Wandering about the gardens with her while she explained the various lovely blooms which would appear in different beds . . . sun and rain permitting . . . she had just arrived at her summer home and the flowers have just been set out

One lovely bed of rare petunias and a bright clump of fuchsias were the only posies so far to show their pretty heads .

She told us that when she was a little girl she played "grown-ups" and wore the drooping fuchsia blossoms in her ears for ear-rings . . . showing that she had her enchanting imagination even as a child

Her life is a sort of Cinderella story, we think . . . the belle of her generation . . . later wife of the First Gentleman of the Commonwealth, Governor Curtis Guild . . . and in the prime of her interesting life as Ambassadress to the Court of All the Russias . . .

The "pretended" ear-rings were later to be replaced with real diamonds, rubies and pearls and how marvelously they became her . . . She is one of the great ladies of our time who wears jewels regally . . . not a bit like a Christmas tree of which we are sometimes reminded

Rare and Interesting Treasures

WE ADORE TO ROAM THROUGH HER FASCINATING house, filled with rare and interesting treasures from Russia . . . unique in themselves and with the most absorbing histories . . .

One delicate bracelet is lying on her shrine . . . a golden bauble with tiny bangles hanging from it . . . each a little jem in itself which was presented to her by members of the Court at Eastertide . . . a quaint custom among the nobility

Rare Tapestry

BITS OF RARE TAPESTRY . . . beautiful objects in silvercraft . . . rare frames in which the autographed visages of Dukes and Duchesses smile out at you . . . all these in a setting of comfy chairs and lounges, tea-tables, flowers and charm make you forget the hurry and fuss of today and carry you back to a period of culture, coquetry and calm

LUNCHEON WAS SERVED in the low, cool dining room with windows opening into the sea . . . on Russian lace cloth and silver service . . . preceded by the most refreshing champagne cocktails we have had in a decade . . . we sigh for the days of yore!

AND YOU MUST LEAVE US here . . . because we never reveal a word of luncheon chatter to anyone . . . ever . . . the things we tell YOU are the bits of gossip which people impart to us for publication

Jeanne Graduated

JOANNE PALFREY ONE OF the pretty Palfrey sisters, was graduated from Miss Winsor's School this week and Father Palfrey graduated too . . . from Winsors. Ever since the first Palfrey girl entered this historic institution, Mr. Palfrey has been president of the school . . . now he is resigning his place with the departure of his last daughter in favor of Samuel Cabot . . . father of Helen Cabot a bud of last season

WE HEAR THAT THE POTTER PALMERS, SENIOR, will not gladden the hearts of their friends at Bar Harbor this summer . . . they are planning to go to Santa Barbara, California, to be near their daughter, Bertha who is expecting the arrival of the stork . . . Maybe the young Potter Palmers will drift westward before the warm days are over

WE HEAR THE FREDDIE CHURCHES are back from their honeymoon . . . even cruising in the blue Mediterranean has to have an end sometime. They were on the George Batchelders yacht for a month, we hear drifting along the Italian coast. You remember George is over in sunny Italy, a dark-eyed Italian boat builder's daughter is over there too . . . Could anything be nicer than the warmth of the Sicilian sun after a cold New England winter?

Mrs. Church

IN CASE YOU HAVEN'T heard . . . a baby daughter has arrived to take her place with the other Woods children . . . and Betty Woods (Ell[illegible] Barrell) are receiving congratulations

MR AND MRS ALAN STEIN-ERT (Claire Newman of New Orleans) are rejoicing over the arrival of their second daughter born at Richardson House on June 1

CENTERVILLE, ON CAPE Cod, seems to be the family's choice for the summer months . . . sister, Mr and Mrs. William C. Peters, have taken a cottage by the sea for the season and we will hope they hear . . . that the wild waves are sa[illegible] . . . so that we may whisper it to you

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

If you are the usual type of traveler going abroad year after year merely to see the same places and to send back pictured postcards to your envious friends, [illegible] Colonel [illegible] Powell's delightful new volume, "Undiscovered Europe," published by Ives Washburn. But if you are one eager for new places, little out-of-the-way towns and villages, quaint domains untouched by the hand of progress, you will find much here to warm your heart and excite your interest.

I remember once that the Pennells wrote a single page [illegible] telling of a certain [illegible] city in France, hidden away in some mountain vastness, utterly forgotten and dreaming on through uncounted years. They had come upon it by the merest chance, and they told of its charm in their own charming way, by pen and pencil, yet they refused to give [illegible] its name [illegible] who would be [illegible] ever afterward. [illegible] with letters of inquiry [illegible] wished to [illegible] all others.

The Pennells kept their [illegible] long time. But of course in the end the place was found, and as they had prophesied [illegible] another interest[illegible] for the guide [illegible] gobble up. Cook tourists [illegible] in strong battalions [illegible] the [illegible] the wonder and [illegible] the spot were destroyed for all time.

Colonel Powell has been to every corner of Europe over a period of many years; and he too has found [illegible] little spots where the world well lost, where time stands still [illegible] lands sequestered and [illegible] strangely sheltered from the [illegible] winds of the world; but, unlike the Pennells, he is not afraid to [illegible] their names and gives us minute directions as to how to reach them.

The result is that you feel like [illegible] bags and starting forth on a joyous pilgrimage, deserting from the regular routes, putting up with all sorts of physical discomfort in order to reach these remote regions.

No [illegible] than [illegible] places are described. Did you know, for example, that along the crest of the Pyrenees from the Bay of Biscay to the Mediterranean, where France and Spain march shoulder to shoulder, only once losing touch, there is to be found the mountain-girt and [illegible] Valleys of Andorra?

"The name of the little state is said to have originated in 805, when Louis le Debonnaire, in thanking those mountain fighters for their aid in stemming the tide of Saracen invasion, exclaimed 'Wild valleys of hell, I christen thee Endor!' The story may be apocryphal, says Colonel Powell, and then again it may be based on fact but from time beyond reckoning the iron-bound cabinet in the [illegible] of which contains the nation's [illegible], has borne the words in Gothic script, 'Las Valls de Andorra', the Valleys of Andorra.

"Even as a schoolboy, Colonel Powell [illegible] geography Andorra held for me a curious fascination. There was something singularly intriguing about this little state no larger on the map than the end of my pencil, tucked away amid the peaks of the Pyrenees. The fact that no one could tell me anything about it, that the accounts of it in the encyclopaedia were exasperatingly vague and unsatisfactory, only served to whet my curiosity, and I determined that some day I would go there and see it for myself. Many years were destined to pass, however, before I actually set out on the steep and winding road that leads to this forgotten land beyond the ranges."

And then he goes into the dim history of the place, and describes it as it exists today. It seems almost incredible that any wilderness has thus retained its ancient calm and peace in a world that rushes along so fast. Yet it is still in the pastoral stage of existence [illegible] agriculture, its only industry, and a not unprofitable one [illegible] smuggling.

The country has no written code of laws, think of that!—decisions as to what is right and wrong being left to the council of patriarchs, who, in cases of perplexity, fall back on tradition, common sense and the Bible. It has no criminals. A prison is there, but the hinges of its ancient doors are rusty from lack of use. There is no police force, no army, no theaters, no movies, no radios, no newspaper, not even a printing press. Neither has the country coinage or postage stamps of its own. The cost of government is so small that the taxes are insignificant.

And so, if the worst befalls us, why not all set out for Andorra?

Then our author tells us of the Grand Duchy of Luxemberg, the little sovereignty which occupies the wooded heights between the Meuse and the Moselle, the Ardennes and Lorraine, which could hardly be improved on for the setting of a romantic novel. He suspects that Anthony Hope had it in mind when he wrote "The Prisoner of Zenda."

There is too the republic in the clouds—San Marino. This is the oldest republic in the world, and barring Monaco, the smallest member of the family of free nations. Its entire population could easily be housed in the Empire State Building. Its area is half that of Staten Island.

Colonel Powell writes with boyish enthusiasm about his various discoveries, and you will envy him his leisurely months of investigation. He has the rare gift of making you see exactly what he has seen. The maps he provides will greatly help the ambitious followers along his romantic trail.

(Below) Miss Gretchen Wilson and Miss Tyler admiring a dainty chemise washed with Lux. Miss Wilson says: "Lux keeps stockings and lingerie new looking such a long time. And my, it's quick. You can do a whole bunch of silk things in no time at all!"

The Allerton House at 57th Street and Lexington Avenue, a smart residential apartment hotel for young college and business and professional women.

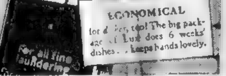
Their list totaled 175! More than 14 dozen—think of it! You've known Lux flakes were the safest, finest soap ever made, but did you realize how economical these marvelous tissue-thin diamonds are? Lux not only keeps nice things colorful and lovely as new—but it goes so far—does so much. Just look over the list one box washed!

35 pairs of stockings	60 handkerchiefs
10 brassieres	11 pairs gloves
10 slips	2 face cloths
9 bloomers	1 silk kimono
8 chemises	1 sweater
7 pajamas	1 smock
6 step-ins	1 blouse
4 vests	1 collar and cuff set
4 nightgowns	1 hat
2 singlettes	1 girdle

For economy's sake, avoid ordinary soaps—cakes, powders, chips. They often contain harmful alkali which weakens fabrics and fades colors. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.



A little goes so far—it's economy to use LUX

I worked to support myself until I couldn't stand it any longer. Now I have been going with a young man about my own age for [illegible] months, and he proposed to me last night. He says he cannot get anything to do. I don't realize exactly how sad I feel, as my case [illegible] three months ago. I have my own [illegible] and he comes to see me Wednesday, Saturday and [illegible] Sunday afternoon. I'll be [illegible] for a part.

Proper Way to Speak on Phone

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

One afternoon while I was at my cousin's home the telephone rang. My cousin answered it and the person calling asked for me. My cousin then asked who was calling and because the person calling wouldn't tell him who it was my cousin hung up. I told my cousin that he should not have asked who was calling if the call wasn't for him and that he should have called me as soon as the person calling asked for me. He thinks that because it was his home he had a right to ask who it was. Which of us is right?

A

Your cousin did have a right to ask the name of the person who was calling, for it is, as he says, his home, but he raised this to [illegible] done to make things easier for [illegible] nothing on earth can excuse his rudeness in hanging up the receiver when the person who was calling refused to give the name.

Second Marriage

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it proper for a young widow to continue to wear her wedding and engagement rings after becoming engaged to another man?

2. If the man does not give her an engagement ring would it be proper when going from this up, must ring after her second marriage?

WIDOW

1. No. When a woman decides to marry a second time she should, of course, cease wearing the engagement ring and the wedding ring that are associated with her first marriage. This decision of course will certainly be due to the man whom she marries.

2. No. As in matters of feeling, you must be the one to decide. And I feel sure that any good woman, about to be married, does.

Barefoot Is Cause of Hookworm

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FOR MANY years little was known concerning hookworm. The disease was common, particularly in the Southern States, but there, as elsewhere where persons go barefoot and thus may contract the disease, its true nature was unsuspected.

Dr. Copeland

It was estimated at one time that more than 30 per cent of school children in the South had this disease, and though the disease is not [illegible] as formerly, a recent [illegible] announces that hookworm victims are still to be found in some areas.

Hookworm is caused by small worms which enter the body through the skin, reach the circulation and eventually are carried to the lungs. There they hurt [illegible] walls of the [illegible] and do severe damage to the health of the individual, before they are expelled.

In 1915 the Rockefeller Sanitary Commission declared that the disease could be prevented. To accomplish this, they found it necessary to pass sanitation laws and to educate the people in personal hygiene and the necessity of wearing shoes. The [illegible] of the disease is [illegible] Thymol or carbon tetrachloride [illegible] the [illegible] and often just a few [illegible] clear the intestines of all the worms and eggs of the hookworm. It is claimed that a [illegible] dose will remove 95 to 100 per cent of the worms.

Bill Decides on the Job at Home

(Concluded From Yesterday)

IN THE AUTUMN Linda returned. Hayes had gone up a few weeks previously to attend to some business and to bring her back and had left Bill in full charge, with a free hand. And on the boat, returning, were Walter Mason and Margaret, who introduced themselves promptly to the cordial Hayes.

While Linda and Margaret talked ... on the deck, Mason and Hayes sat in the smoking room and ... industry and ... [illegible]

"I hate like hell to lose him. But I wouldn't stand in his way. Look here, we'll put it up to him, shall we—and see what he says? and leave it to him?"

He added, "He'd be a fool not to go back to New York. But I won't tell him that," Hayes concluded, grinning.

[illegible] Nevis was at San Juan to meet them. [illegible] Hayes [illegible] pleased [illegible]

[illegible]

"Uncle Walter, what's up your sleeve?"

"A couple of things," ... "but they're up to Bill. For instance, Mr. Hayes wants him to stick around down here, or I can give him a job here with his old outfit, or I can take him back to New York. Which shall it be?"

[illegible]

"You'll have to ask Bill. As you say, it's up to him."

[illegible] "Hey, folks!" He [illegible] "Golly, it's good to have you back." [illegible] "Lord, it's swell seeing you" [illegible] "and I've got a barrelful of news."

[illegible]

"Sam Burton." [illegible]

SUPPER WAS COLD

[illegible] "I'm too comfortable to move but I must be going on home. Coming, Tim? ... I must unpack a little before we get to bed. Nevis, you're a lamb. I'm so glad to see you again."

Hayes said, "I'll walk up with you, Linda. But I'll be back. I want to talk to Bill."

When they had gone Bill said, lighting a cigarette, "Sam wants us to come home. Business has picked up like a million. They want me back, on the old bond racket. They'll give me a desk of my own as I had before and a chance at a partnership. What do you know about that?" he asked, beaming.

"Up to me how much. After this experience, gosh, I could sell anybody anything," said Bill. "How about it, Nevis?"

[illegible]

"You'll have to decide for yourself. Whatever you want to do is all right with me. But Uncle Walter has a proposition for you too."

Mason said quietly,

INCREASE OF SALARY

"Two, really. I can place you back in the Guayabal company at an increase of salary and with a much better chance at getting on. That is, if you want to stay down here. Or, if you want to stay down here and don't want to go back to that other gang, Hayes, I know, is going to suggest a general managership, as assistant to himself, and in full charge while he is North, six months of the year. But I have a second proposition to make. I can find a place for you in the New York end of our business. An executive-engineering job. Your experience here will be invaluable. I can't promise you more than six thousand a year to start. But you'll go up rapidly. I will put a block of stock in your name. You were to have it when I died anyhow, or rather, Nevis was. You kids might as well have it now. It will mean a little extra income and it will mean you'll feel you're working for yourself. Mind now, you won't have the life and death power in a small way that you'd get down here as Hayes' representative, and it won't mean the big money, in lumps, that you'll make if you go back to Burton. But it's steady and sure and a chance to work up into something really good. How about it? What do you want to do?"

Bill said after a moment,

"An embarrassment of riches. Father wants me to come home. I've had a cable. It seems that me beloved cousin isn't doing so well."

That night when the Masons had gone to bed and Hayes had gone home, Bill and Nevis sat on the veranda [illegible]

[illegible] "... what do you want me to do?"

HIT IN A HEAP

"I'm not going to make any more decisions. I won't. I don't want to. I want it to be your way. I made a mistake originally in trying to run things. It can't be done. I won't pull against you. You're the head of the family," said Nevis, smiling to herself in the darkness, "and you're the one to decide."

"Is it really up to me?" he asked again.

"Yes. I don't want you to do anything but pick the work you'll be happiest in and which will get you the furthest ahead," she told him.

He said, "I'll sleep on it. I've got to think this out," he admitted.

"Of course you have," she said confidently.

She asked no questions [illegible] the week [illegible]

He had [illegible] mind [illegible] go back to Pennsylvania [illegible] no matter what she might [illegible] [illegible] in West [illegible] manner. It would be expected of them. They knew everyone. Everyone knew them. They couldn't get away from it [illegible] willing to be considered [illegible] and stodgy. No [illegible] was out. There remained then a certain six thousand a year, a block of stock and a [illegible] by very hard work making himself into something [illegible] high powered and [illegible] executive and perhaps [illegible] a few private reforms into the business when the opportunity offered —or going back with Burton and picking up the gilt threads where he had dropped them.

At the end of the week he said to Nevis gravely,

"If it's all right with you, I'll take Uncle Walter's second offer and we'll go back to town, sort of like to hunt for flats again?" he asked her smiling.

She said [illegible]

"Whatever you had decided was good enough for me. But you've decided the thing I thought was just a little better. You'll have to work hard," she told him [illegible]

The night before they docked they lay off Fort Hamilton and watched the lights of Staten Island. Nevis, stretched out in a steamer [illegible] ... Home ... tomorrow, Bill. I'm going to have the time of my life fixing up the flat and keeping a budget book. Don't laugh. I'm going to, really. Oh, [illegible]

And a day or two later it was Christmas, with the Masons there and Della and Mort running in and [illegible]

[illegible]

"Of course they weren't. But you hadn't much time for shopping, down there, and we've only been home three days."

[illegible]

It isn't the dreaded budget book, is it?"

[illegible] but it's the reason for the budget book, after all. [illegible]

What is the PRICE OF BEAUTY?

Without health there can be little real beauty. The wise woman knows that the condition of her body shows itself on her face, her complexion, and in her eyes.

Try the pleasant "cereal way" to protect yourself from constipation. Science has proved that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes iron, which helps build up the blood.

The "bulk" in this delicious cereal is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than abusing your system with pills and drugs — so often habit-forming!

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

ANOTHER MOVE TO AID INVESTING PUBLIC

By B. C. FORBES

Atlantic City, June 7—"The Association has decided to throw open to the general public its business meetings.

There's a profundity of significance in that one-sentence announcement by the National Electric Light Association, gathered here in annual convention.

There are reasons.

Time was when securities were owned by only the few. Owners, controllers, managers did not find it necessary to let daylight into their corporate acts. They did as they pleased. Public opinion did not fetter or greatly influence them. Outside stockholders accepted without question whatever information directors or executives chose to furnish.

Thus, it came about that even after ownership became widely distributed and the inner clique held only a modest percentage of the capital stock, they regarded their company as a sort of closed corporation, a private affair, to be run exactly as they saw fit without reckoning with the views or wishes of the real owners, the outside stockholders owning among them the majority of the shares.

Financial Democracy on Way

Just as the people of various nations have rebelled against their quondam autocratic rulers and set up democracies, so investors in this country are beginning to demand greater consideration, a more potent voice in their companies, fuller information, a more generous measure of democracy.

Nor will they submit to being thwarted.

Growing Sentiment to Protect Public

The New York State Chamber of Commerce last week promulgated and endorsed the empowering of stockholders to appoint independent auditors to examine all the acts of corporation managers, all the figures, all the facts, and to issue a full, fearless, uncensored report.

The New York Stock Exchange is demanding more frequent reports—quarterly [illegible] from [illegible] corporation, is receiving daily records of short sales and is unprecedentedly vigilant in investigation of any [illegible].

Outside stockholders have begun to attend annual meetings and to put pointed questions to executives.

When companies fall under suspicion [illegible] security holders are no longer content in every instance to let insiders organize their own hand-picked "protective committees" [illegible] choose friendly receivers.

They are not content to be left in the dark. They are determined to institute steps against being fleeced. They are eager to oust those insiders who played against them with loaded dice and thereby ignobly, sneakily, contemptibly, criminally robbed them. Contrasted with such gentry, the worst card sharp has wings.

Yes, the investment world can no longer be an oligarchy; it is heading toward democracy.

Those who stand in the way are likely to receive short shrift.

SPECTATOR Says:

The market acts well considering the bad news and the break in the B. M. T. issues. The encouraging thing was that lower prices failed to bring out renewal of liquidation even when wheat had its bad spill. All in all, it's a pretty artificial market and one best left alone unless some important good news develops.

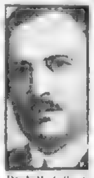
CHECK TAX IS SEEN AS IN BAD FORM

By FRANK H. MELOON

[illegible]



Dr. A. W. Gilbert

"If the federal tax on bank checks is to stand, certainly the banks have every right to object to the form in which it is applied. In addition to discouraging the maintaining of checking accounts and the consequent reduction of deposits, the tax, as it now stands, puts upon the banks the cost of bookkeeping and re[illegible]

Each month the banks must count the number of checks drawn by each depositor, deduct 2 cents for each one, remit the total deducted to the collector of internal revenue and then send the depositor a record of the deduction.

"Why should the banks be obliged to assume the expense of this operation? Why not the simple stamp tax, whereby the depositor will purchase stamps at 2 cents each and affix one on each check drawn?

Keeping a check book balance is confounding enough to many depositors. Does it require any stretch of imagination to conceive of the confusion to be caused them by this scheme? The average depositor will simply go on drawing checks and wonder at the end of the month why his balance does not agree with the balance on the bank's statement.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LEADERS

Abandonment of the dry cause by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and his demand for repeal today [illegible] financial sentiment. The [illegible] market effect however was a flurry in the [illegible] stocks.

Rails were supported by the increase of more than 5000 cars in today's loading report and by declaration of the regular Atchison preferred dividend.

Utilities React on Washington Efforts

Utilities held well this forenoon but turned reactionary following new efforts in Washington to make the companies pay the power tax. The consumer bears the burden in the revenue bill.

Strength in Bonds Found Constructive

Fresh strength in bonds today was a constructive development. The obligations were the best performers with gains running from 1 to 6 points. Another helpful factor was better action of wheat after its weakness of the last two days.

Commercial Loans' Rise Is Explained

Consolidated condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in leading cities attracted some attention particularly in showing an increase of $46,000,000 in "all other" or commercial loans. Rather than reflecting success in credit expansion however it was suggested that much of this resulted from the sale of acceptances in this market by foreign central banks in connection with their recent re[illegible] of balances.

B.-M. T. Retirement Plan Is Reported

Wall Street hears co-operation between Brooklyn Manhattan Transit Co. and bankers has cleared the way for retirement of August 1 maturity of $13,500,000 three-year 6 per cent secured gold notes. Fear of the maturity and subsequent maturity of $32,421,000 I. R. T. convertible 7 per cent notes September 1 and $[illegible] I. R. T. 6 per cent notes October 1 are blamed for the decline in New York traction shares. B. M. T. refunding is expected to be made out of cash resources and advances by banks. It is indicated that revolving credits may become available with temporary suspension of common dividends. Earnings are deemed sufficient in any event to continue payment of the 6 per cent preferred dividend.

Nash Earnings Estimate Given

Nash Motors is understood to have earned the equivalent of 46 cents a common share in the fiscal year just ended. Stock is on a $2 annual basis.

Alcohol Price Boost Seen Likely

Boost in the price of alcohol for third quarter delivery is said to be under contemplation by leading manufacturers.

Endicott Johnson to Buy Preferred

Endicott Johnson Corp. plans to purchase for retirement and cancellation up to 15,000 shares of its 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock. Through Goldman, Sachs & Co. the company is inviting tenders from preferred stockholders for sale to it of not more than that total at $105 a share net, less necessary New York State and federal stock transfer stamps.

RESISTANCE IN WALL STREET IS BETTER

New York, June 7—Important shares were heavy through most of today's session of the New York Stock Exchange, but the market offered somewhat better resistance than it did yesterday.

The bond market continued to maintain a good tone, the dollar was again firm in the foreign exchange markets, and pressure was mostly lifted from the wheat market, so Wall Street did not find the day particularly depressing.

SPECIAL LIQUIDATION

The market was firm for a few minutes in response to enactment of the tax measure but special liquidation cropped out here and there later.

The market closed with a heavy tone and trading dull. Leaders off a point or so included U. S. Steel, New York Central, Santa Fe, American Can, Auburn, Consolidated Gas and Coca Cola, American Telephone, American Tobacco "B," General Foods and Macy.

Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit was again heavy, off a couple of points. Numerous preferred stocks showed gains. Transactions approximated 900,000 shares.

National Distillers Products and Corn Products Refining rose about 1½ points, presumably reflecting developments in the prohibition controversy, but then reacted. Owens Glass gained 2 in a thin market.

ROCKEFELLER AND MARKET

News of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, abandonment of the prohibition cause was not greeted with the big bullish demonstration that has attended various "wet" developments in the past.

When professional traders were more active, it became a fashion to couple market upturns with rumors of impending anti-prohibition developments.

Conservative security analysis, however, have been cautious in attempting to forecast the effect of changes in the prohibition laws on individual securities. An important factor in Wall Street wet proclivities has been the belief that a change in the laws might solve the important problem of providing government revenues, but, now that the federal tax measure has been enacted, that aspect of the matter has become less interesting for the moment.

Such selling as came into the market in selected issues again seemed to be of the character of that which preceded the recent recovery—the selling out of long holdings to raise cash.

Special developments, however, affected isolated issues. Auburn reacted on rumors that it would shortly announce a price reduction. B. M. T. was presumably affected again by discussions of the dividend, and the necessity of meeting the $13,500,000 note maturity Aug. 1. The dividend is being more than earned, it is understood, but some reduction may be made in order to reduce indebtedness.

SIMPSON IS NEW UTILITY HEAD

Chicago, June 7 (INS)—On the eve of a $70,000,000 financing program a new leader assumed command today for the $947,307,639 Insull Utilities domain to replace Samuel Insull, one of the nation's foremost figures in the electric power and light industry.

Insull, whose career began with a $1.25 a week office boy's job in England, resigned from the board chairmanship of the three huge operating companies which he had developed, as well as from all of their subsidiaries.

James Simpson was elected chairman of the boards of the Commonwealth Edison Co., the People's Gas Light and Coke Co., the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois to succeed him.

Simpson, who cut short a visit in India and hurried home at the behest of the directors of the three utility concerns, resigned his post as board chairman of Marshall Field and Company in order to devote his full time to his new duties.

Explaining that his retirement was actuated by regard for his health, Insull announced that he also had tendered his resignation as a joint receiver for the Middle West Utilities Company, parent holding corporation of all the Insull enterprises.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

—By LOUIS SOBOL—

Down Memory Lane

(With Paul Robeson, World-Famous Negro Singer)

My first musical memory—growling along with my older brothers in Princeton, N. J. At eight years of age I was already singing the bass part.

Paul Robeson

I made my first public appearance in the Somerville high school minstrel show. I sang "Down By the Old Mill Stream." Whereupon, the glee club instuctor, Miss Voseller, noted my voice and straightway gave me free vocal instruction. That early I was accustomed to audiences because my father, William D. Robeson, was a preacher and he taught me to declaim in public just about as soon as I could frame sentences. My mother died when I was only 6 and my father became my chief guide. He practically brought me up.

College next—Rutgers. Here I forgot all about singing for the sake of football. But college was good to me. I made the all-America two years, under George Foster Sanford, coach. I won Phi Beta Kappa; was a four-letter man in football, baseball, basket ball and track. I was getting a preliminary stage training without realizing it as I went into the oratorical contests and won prizes. Then, when I played my first dramatic part in "Emperor Jones"—the first time, also, that I had ever been on the stage—I was already accustomed to histrionics.

"Always, when I start thinking about my stage career, I think of those who have consistently helped me, praised me, worked for my success—Heywood Broun, Carl Van Vechten, Florenz Ziegfeld, Eugene O'Neill, the members of the Providence Players group, Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Never have I been so nervous as I was when "Show Boat" opened here. I felt as if the weight of the world was on my shoulders. You see, I gauged my interpretation of "Joe" and "Ol' Man River," at the Drury Lane Theater, to fit an English audience—made it a restrained emotion kind of thing. I did not know if people would like it here. But they did. And I rejoice that America accepted it beautifully.

My concerts have always been profound and happy experiences to me, permitting a wide range of musical expression; giving me a more direct contact with audiences. How proud I was when signed up to take part in a series of European concerts which included Jeritza, Kreisler and Chaliapin. Chaliapin has been one of my great favorites; what I call his speech in song. I liked him best in "Boris Goudenoff." But opera has never appealed to me greatly. I like those arts which seem closer to the natural resolution of life.

I am grateful for my opportunities to sing in foreign capitals—Prague, Vienna, Budapest. I learned about the people there. Their foods. Their clothes. Their customs. Some of the experiences were unforgettable, especially appearing at Albert Hall—the goal of every concert artist—and filling its ten thousand capacity twice. Also, while playing "Show Boat" at the Drury Lane Theatre in London, I gave solo concerts there on Tuesdays.

My musical memories are varied, a tangled record of names, places, people and facts. My debut occurred in "Shuffle Along" as one of the Harmony Kings. I was nervous and lumbering so I stumbled on my first entrance and almost knocked over the other three Kings. Then I sang "Old Black Joe" and almost broke up the show—happy circumstance.

Later I played in the "Plantation" with Florence Mills. The only guy to spot me in those early days was S. Jay Kaufman. I'll never forget that!

with Edith Day and Cedric Hardwicke. Royalty attended the show. I even had a command performance at St. James' Palace before the Prince of Wales and the King of Spain. Later I sang for the Duke and Duchess of York. I have been fortunate in knowing many other celebrities directly—Lloyd George, H. G. Wells. I was Premier MacDonald's guest in the House of Commons.

Noteworthy among my stage experiences was playing in London with Mrs. Patrick Campbell. In one scene I was supposed to sing a spiritual and then drop off to sleep. Always, though, Mrs. Campbell would station herself in the wings; and no sooner would I finish my song and close my eyes than she would shout: "Sing some more. Sing another spiritual." So I would have to open my eyes, sing, and then go to sleep all over again. This went on, performance after performance, until the author of the play happened to drop in unexpectedly. From that time on, of course, I went to sleep only once in each performance.

In "All God's Chillun Got Wings," I played opposite Dorothy Peterson, now in the pictures. In "Othello," I had the distinction of acting with the distinguished actress, Sybil Thorndike.

Always Eugene O'Neill has been an influence in my work. Thus I was happy to get the opportunity to play his "Hairy Ape." How well I recall his early experiences with rhythm. Some of his dialogue was written, I believe, to the timing of the metronome.

Among the men and women of my own race whose accomplishments have impressed me, I wish to mention the following:

Roland Hayes. His voice has a marvelous, true Negro quality—soft. Yet curiously enough, I like him best when singing German songs. The Dream Song from "Manon Lescaut," he sings perhaps better than anyone else.

Charles Gilpin—his performance in "Emperor Jones."

Rose McClendon. Her work in Arthur Hopkins' "Deep River" and in the Theater Guild production of "Porgy." She is by far our first actress.

James Weldon Johnson and his poetry. Especially "God's Trombones." They are Negro sermons. I did them in London with great success and I hope to do them here.

Langston Hughes. Best known for the "Weary Blues" and works in the folk idiom. Oscar Hammerstein II did the same thing marvelously in the lyric for "Ol' Man River."

Countee Cullen, poet. Among his best known works are "Heritage" and "The Black Christ." He is particularly interesting to me because he makes no attempt to write Negro idiom, preferring to follow the traditions of English poetry, and gaining distinction thereby.

Dr. R. R. Moton, educator. He has followed in the footsteps of Booker T. Washington.

Dr. Carver, noted for his work in food experimentation.

Wm. Marion Cook, Harry Burleigh and Clarence White are among our notable composers. White is also a distinguished violinist.

PAINE'S HOLDS STYLE SHOW

Tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Paine Furniture Co., Arlington st., will stage a Style Show and Open House presenting the newest ideas in home furnishing.

This is an innovation for Paine's and has been planned with the idea of acquainting a larger number of people with the unusual scope of Paine facilities for supplying fashion-right, dependable things for the home at moderate prices.

Interesting displays have been arranged on all floors. In the Federal-Directoire Rooms the dining tables will be set with correct appointments, the silverware being supplied through the courtesy of Shreve, Crump and Low, and the linen through the courtesy of Howell Brothers. The Budget Rooms have been furnished with groupings that maintain Paine quality at exceedingly low prices. On this floor also there will be two completely set dining tables. The Outdoor Terrace has been transformed into a veritable garden with evergreens loaned by Little Tree Farms and suggests the intriguing possibilities for outdoor living that can be created with this season's summer furniture. Here under the shadow of festive lawn umbrellas, Salada tea and Weston wafers will be served.

The shops where Paine products are made will be in operation and open to inspection. Those desiring to make a complete tour of the building will be personally conducted.

A musical program has been arranged by M. Steinert & Sons.

Paine's declare they hope to attract those who have never been in the store before. To such they extend a special invitation to see the many points of interest of this nationally known institution and to learn first hand that one may buy Paine furniture for a low price and obtain high quality.

340 Feared Lost in Storm; Rush Aid

Tokio, June 7 (AP)—A dispatch to the Rengo News Agency from Hakkodati, Japan, today said grave fears were felt for the safety of 300 Russian fishermen and 40 members of the crew of the Japanese fishing steamer Genzan Maru who have been missing since they abandoned the ship yesterday off Karaginsky Island, east of Kamchatka.

2 Hurt as Portsmouth Dock Collapses

Portsmouth, N. H., June 7 (INS)—When a dock on which they were unloading a freighter, at Freeman's Point, collapsed today, two men were injured, 18 others leaped to safety and two freight cars and two cranes plunged into the Piscataqua river.

ONE OF FEATURES AT PAINE'S STYLE SHOW

Salada tea and Weston wafers will be served tomorrow in a modern setting when Paine Furniture Company holds its style show and open house, presenting the latest ideas in home furnishings. Evergreens that shadow the tea tables have been loaned by the Little Tree Farms.

Mothers Proud of Them

Boy Scouts of New England

TRAINED BOY SCOUTS SET UP TENT IN WOODS AS PART OF SUMMER TRAINING. THE SCOUTS ARE ROBERT BRENNAN AND JACK SMITH, OF SOUTH WEYMOUTH

Every mother in New England has at some time looked with admiration at the lad in the Boy Scout uniform, whether he is her boy or the boy of the family next door.

She knows he is taught to keep his shoulders high, his chin up and look the world in the face, finding at least one good deed to perform every day.

Perhaps she has not read the principles to which he agrees as a Boy Scout, which are the basis of his training and which stimulate him to grow up as a good man. Here, then, is the Boy Scout oath, which he takes:

On my honor, I will do my best—

1—To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the Boy Scout law.

2—To help other people at all times.

3—To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

These are purposes, every mother knows, which can help every boy, which can do no boy harm.

The Boy Scouts of Boston and vicinity are to double their membership this year. The mother whose boy is not in can help him by enrolling him now. With that set of principles in his youthful mind his chances of reaching fine manhood are improved.

Selfishness and Death

The Auto Killing Record

"Autoists Were More Careful. Only Ten Persons Killed in State Last Week."*—From a newspaper headline.

Only ten! Only ten lives important to the unfortunate persons themselves, to their families and friends.

Why any lives at all sacrificed to recklessness on the highways?

Recklessness is the word, of course. Nearly all accidents are avoidable. They occur when the element of recklessness displaces caution and prudence.

If drivers had any imagination whatever, if they could place themselves and their families in the position of any one of the ten who were struck down and killed last week, the fatality list would be utterly eliminated.

There then would not be "Only Ten" deaths to attract the passing notice of the public but erecting monuments of grief in every one of the saddened homes.

Registrar Ryan's report of the past week contains other facts which should not be lost sight of.

There were 45 persons convicted of operating while under the influence of liquor, or 51 less than the preceding week.

Any week which finds either 45 or 106 autoists in a single State convicted of operating his car while his mentality and judgment have been impaired by alcoholic liquor is not a week to be boastful of.

With 3000 drivers running afoul of the auto laws and the prohibition laws every two weeks there is being established a widening circle of law disrespect certain to undermine the value of all law and obedience.

Let's get on to ourselves. Human life is too sacred to be wasted in an orgy of human selfishness. For it is personal selfishness alone, a disregard of the rights of others, which prompts us to jeopardize their safety.

Ancients and Honorables

They Enjoy Being Alive

A dyspeptic critic once said he didn't like the Boston Ancients and Honorables; they had too good a time.

We saw them on parade yesterday in their brilliant uniforms (it was the 249th anniversary of this historic military and social institution) and we were glad there was somebody these drab days who can smile with the joy of living.

It has been our experience that anybody who couldn't like the Ancients could hardly like anyone, including himself.

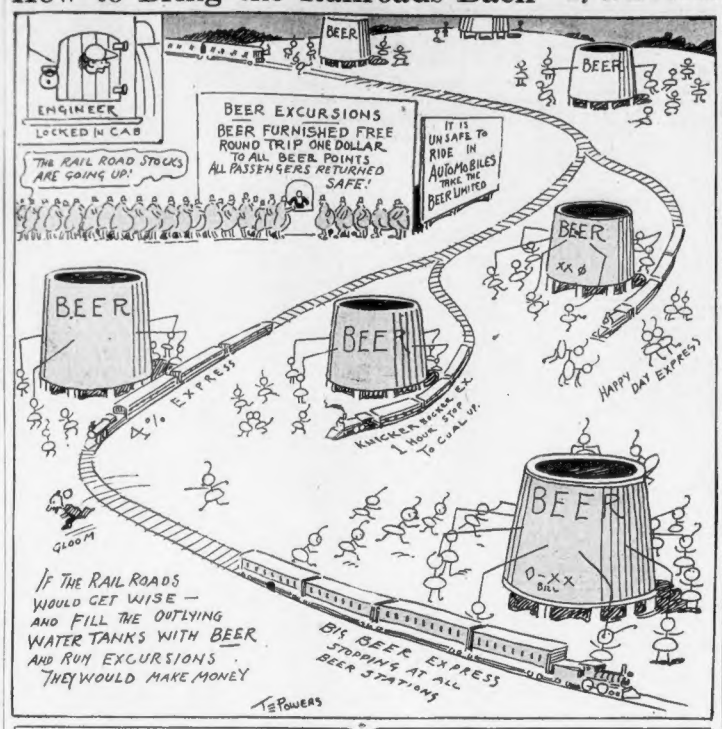
He is like the professional crepe hanger who looked out at the bright sun and lamented that while it would be good for his health and his business it certainly would singe the lustre off his new straw hat.

Of course if there are really any people who don't like the Ancients, they are the jealous cats outside the organization or the silly pacifists who close their eyes or look the other way whenever they come upon a man in a military uniform.

Well, the Ancients have survived 248 years of it. Somehow or other they manage to get along, lightening life with a hearty laugh and occasionally reminding this country that what it won in the way of liberty it won by fighting for and what it preserves in the way of independence it will preserve by fighting for.

How to Bring the Railroads Back

By T. E. Powers



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

People Must Eat!

TALK, TALK, TALK!
That's what happens in Washington.
Talk, talk, talk,
Going on and on,
About every subject
Under the sun.
Subjects that start out
As real, concrete problems,
Needing plain, practical solutions,
And end up, in Congress,
As meaningless dribbles
Of sound.

Elsie Robinson

TAKE THE TAXPAYERS' MONEY
AND DO NOTHING WITH IT EXCEPT TALK, AT A TIME LIKE THIS,
WHEN PEOPLE ARE HUNGRY,
WHEN PEOPLE MUST EAT?

Talk, talk, talk!
Going on, day after day.
Talks about taxes,
Talks about tariffs,
Talks about budgets,
And who's to blame.
Democrats blaming Republicans;
Republicans blaming Democrats,
Everybody blaming somebody;
Everybody suggesting a plan,
Yelling for a cure,
Then, the next moment,
Forgetting all about it,
Starting another subject,
Raising another riot.

AND ALL THE TIME
JUST ONE THING MATTERS—
People—
They are the only thing
That matters now.
All needs are important.
All possessions are valuable
To a government.
But people are most valuable.
And their need is most important.
Not their need for new laws,
Or taxes, or tariffs,
Or different working hours,
But their simple,
Fundamental need
FOR FOOD.

Put laws in order:
Put taxes in order;
Put departments in order—
But put people in order first!
Decrease our deficit,
Fill our coffers—
BUT FILL THOSE STOMACHS FIRST!

Federal government or State government,
Republican party or Democratic party,
There is only one party now—
THE AMERICAN PEOPLE.
There is only one need now—
HUMAN HUNGER.
And nothing else matters
Until we've attended to that.

Eight million people unemployed.
Three years of hard times
In America,
Three years of hot air
In Congress.
AND CONGRESS STILL TALKING!
CUT OUT THE TALKING, CONGRESS!
CUT OUT THE SQUABBLING.
STOP PLAYING POLITICS.
STOP MAKING CAMPAIGN SPEECHES.
FOR GOD'S SAKE, GET BUSY!

New York Day by Day

Domestic Ties

NEW YORK, June 7—The financial chaos has tightened many New York loose domestic ties into pleasant knots. Thousands of husbands for 10 years have been flailing about in a churn of high pressure, with wives parked at fashionable spas and children at finishing schools.

From this topsy-turviness they could distribute a largesse of motor cars, jewels and unlimited charge accounts, but very little affection. So distant were the relationships that many money-makers had to suffer a gigolo in the home. Or a divorce.

There were husbands who did not see their wives more than a few weeks each year. Children became total strangers. Men who lived by ticker tape relaxed in night clubs or on the high seas with mistresses.

At the Coffee House Club they were discussing the sudden rise and quick descent of literary rockets. Perhaps the most notable of the generation was Michael Arlen, who flashed so spectacularly in a fleeting zizz-boom-ash! For two years his bright-jacketed novels were best sellers and his name illuminated every magazine cover. Two plays ran simultaneously in New York and London. Then obscurity. The only ever-night success to remain on the pedestal is F. Scott Fitzgerald, who settled down to a steady writing pace.

There was something of finality in the reply of a drab-liveried driver of a growler in the cab ranks alongside the Plaza last evening. In waiting on the steps for Harry Silvey, I stepped to the curb and inquired of a veteran Jehu: "Well, Colonel, how are things going?" Without a flicker he replied: "Merrily to hell, Major."

This column timidly predicted the success of a news picture theater five years before it clicked as a reality. Emboldened by such capitalistic wizardry, it now suggests a temple devoted entirely to animated cartoons—of the Mickey Mouse school of hilarity. I have many supporters in this idea—Titans of intellect, such as Floyd Gibbons, Lucius Beebe and Valentine Williams. Nor will there be any patience for movie executives who say t cannot be done. They told me that about the news reel notion and then did it. And did not even ask me to the grand opening.

* * *

It recalls a chameleon, unpredictable idea H. T. Webster and I incubated years ago for the sudden amassing of an unheard-of fortune. Behind closed doors we tried it out on sundry master minds who fairly shouted its magnificence. The only difficulty was that in starting operations we found that 746—by actual count—persons had thought of it from 6 to 20 years earlier.

Just Folks

A Day of Fishing

I've been fishing and I've seen
Dogwoods pink and white in bloom—
Tapestries from Nature's loom—
And I found a solemn place
Like a great cathedral space
Where the sunbeams brightly gleamed
And like lighted candles seemed,

Slowly as I walked along
I heard many a bit of song.
Chanting bravely overhead
Was a cardinal robed in red,
Till I fancied standing there
All but humans were at prayer.
Farther down the stream I found
Trilliums carpeting the ground.

Resting once, my brow to cool,
I remembered, when in school,
I had thought my teacher stern
For insisting that I learn
Bryant's Thanatopsis all.
Strangely struggling to recall
Line by line that ode once more
All the day I said it o'er.

I've been fishing! I have seen
River banks refreshed and clean;
I've walked several happy miles
Through enchanted golden aisles,
Gazed on splendors, old, but new;
Relearned Thanatopsis, too,
Listened to a cardinal sing—
But I didn't catch a thing.

Congress Should Ignore All Sissy Economics

In opposing Congressional plans for a bond issue to accelerate job creating construction activities, the Chief Executive and the Treasury head are actuated very largely by an all too tender regard for the timidities of bankers.

There is a disposition to let economic activity dwindle still further in deference to the fright of financiers. Evidently the Administration has yet to learn what the country long ago found out, namely, that the Wall Street bankers, instead of being colossal and dictatorial figures, are in reality nowadays only old ladies with shaken nerves.

Instead of equivocating further with half-way measures, based on sissy economics compounded of timidity and negation, Congress should forthwith turn its attention to TRADE-BUILDING POLICIES.

The myth that the evils that beset the country could be eliminated by the indirect route of financing the financiers has been exploded.

The attempt to get FIAT prosperity by attempting to peg railroad bonds through advances by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which generously enabled weak carriers to bail out disappointed bankers, has been futile.

Accordingly, until fundamentals are corrected, the financial cripples that went to this Government-owned super bank for succor will be around again in a few months.

The supplementary policy, consisting of the open market operations of the Federal Reserve, has not yet had an affirmatively helpful effect on industry, commerce or agriculture.

The additional credit released by the Federal Reserve banks got dammed up as unused excess reserves in the hands primarily of the large Eastern bankers. They lacked the confidence to invest the additional funds in loans and investments, which would have pumped credit into business. Still more recently part of these reserves have been dissipated in gold exports and increased currency demand.

If reflation is to be the goal, Senator Carter Glass has proposed an alternative method.

Under the Glass proposal national banks would be authorized to use for a period of five years all United States bonds as a basis for national bank notes. The maximum limit would be 100 per cent of their own capital.

The Glass proposal merely carries a step further the present law which gives the currency issuing privilege to the 2 per cent Panama Canal bonds now outstanding. The national banks could issue $114,000,000 more of currency under the existing law. The Glass amendment would give the right to add a billion more of such currency.

Inasmuch as the 7600 national banks are scattered throughout the country, they could thus expand credit and currency in accordance with local need better than a central agency remotely situated at the financial capital.

The Glass bill would further relieve the banks of the dangers of being pinched by hoarding tendencies, and would free the business community of any threat of insufficiency of funds.

It would be a more direct avenue for reflation, or counter deflation, than the present Federal Reserve policy, which it would supplement and re-enforce.

Until business and political management addresses itself courageously to the central problem of enlarging gross turnover, relief measures will be half-hearted and ineffectual.

The way to recovery consists of a bold effort to put supply and demand—production and consumption—in balance again.

Rockefeller Converted

John D., Jr., Forsakes Prohibition

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is at last convinced that prohibition is a failure. He urges that it be repealed.

His attack upon the evils and horrors which have sprung up from prohibition is very important in more ways than one.

Rockefeller is a teetotaler, like his father and his grandfather before him. His mother and his grandmother were crusaders for temperance. With some of the same sort of ardor that characterized the dramatic and sensational career of Carrie Nation, they often invaded saloons, fell upon their knees and prayed that the drunken imbibers present might be saved from the career of drunkenness upon which they had embarked.

Rockefeller, like many other good people believing in temperance, earnestly and sincerely hoped that prohibition would promote temperance and sobriety. Unlike many others less fortified with material funds, he backed that hope to the tune of $350,000. Today, like most good people, his hopes are dashed.

"Drinking has generally increased," he finds. "The speakeasy has replaced the saloon, not only unit for unit, but probably twofold if not threefold.

"A vast army of lawbreakers has been recruited and financed on a colossal scale. Many of our best citizens, piqued at what they regarded as an infringement of their private rights, have openly and unabashed disregarded the Eighteenth Amendment. As an inevitable result respect for all law has been greatly lessened and crime has increased to an unprecedented degree."

The legalized manufacture and sale of beer and wine, closely regulated as in Canada, would bring to our country the condition which good people want to see exist. The real friends of true temperance like Rockefeller, and not the fanatics on either side, should be seriously consulted when this change is effected.
